...ens Fire When Rebuked for Shouting Turns Too Fast.

SECOND GUN VICTIM OPERATED ON HERE

Upper Marlboro Slayer Is Arrested and Held for Inquest.

A country dance at Upper Marlboro, Md., was climaxed early yesterday by the killing of a farmer and the serious wounding of another by Benjamin Jackson, 26-year-old farmer, who became enraged when he was rebuked for calling the figures too fast.

John Colton, 46 years old, and William Chaney, 49 years old, were felled by bullets when they closed in on Jackson when he drew a revolver and threatened to kil... any one who tried to stop him from calling the figures.

Operation Is Performed.

Colton was instantly killed and Chaney was rushed to Casualty Hospital, where he underwent an operation in an effort to save his life. His condition was reported as fair.

Jackson, who police said, was partially under the influence of liquor when he was shouting the figures to be executed by the dancers. After he became angered when rebuked, he leveled his gun at the dancers and opened fire when Colton and Chaney approached them.

Held for Inquest.

Then he ordered the other dancers against the wall, and he moved out of the place and disappeared. He was taken into custody at his home a few hours later.

The dance was at the home of Bob Nicholson, of Upper Marlboro. It was attended by farmers from the countryside.

Four Slain, Fifth Shot By Maddened Husband

Ardmore, Okla., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Four persons are dead and a fifth is wounded as a result of what officers said was an outburst of marital jealousy by Jesse Buckelew, 29-year-old unemployed laborer, before dawn today.

Buckelew, authorities said, killed himself after fatally shooting Mrs. Florence Buckelew, 25, his estranged wife; Glen Fitzgerald, 41, oil field lease boss, and Miss Rica Webb, 22, sister of Mrs. Buckelew. Perry Owen, 30, was wounded by shotgun fire.

5 of 7 Fugitives Caught by Posse

West Virginia Jailer Was Beaten by Men Who Fled Into Hills.

Fayetteville, W. Va., Jan 29—(A.P.). Five of seven prisoners who overpowered the Fayette County jailor and escaped today were recaptured tonight. Surrounded by State police and deputy sheriffs in the New River Canyon beneath scenically famous Hawks Nest, they surrendered quietly and were taken to the jail at Montgomerys.

The group rearrested included Jesse Williams, 24, Negro fugitive from Virginia, wanted at Richmond and Lynchburg, and Eddie Vickers, only white man who participated in the break.

Twenty prisoners refused to join in the escape, made possible when seven prisoners beat Jailor George T. Myles, took his keys and fled into the mountains.

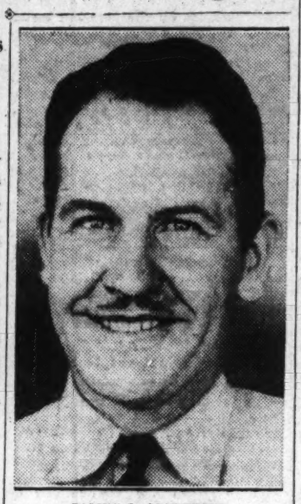
Mattern Comes Here To Plan Globe Flight

U. S.-Berlin Pilot Hopes to Beat Record Held by Post and Gatty.



JAMES L. MATTERN.

Revealing plans for another attempt to fly around the world in an effort to lower the Post-Gatty record, James L. Mattern arrived in Washington yesterday to confer with Government officials.

The noted pilot who, with Bennett H. Griffin, last year made the first transoceanic flight to Berlin and lowered the record for flying the Atlantic Ocean, flew here from New York in an Eastern Air Transport plane.

He disclosed that he hopes to take off from Chicago or New York in Century of Progress 2d in June or July. The plane will be the same one in which he started last year around the world, but which was partially wrecked landing in Russia, forcing the fliers to give up the trip.

Mattern will confer with Col. Clarence M. Young today, seeking permission from the Department of Commerce to start his trip. During the past few months regulations have been put in effect which necessitate securing permits for such a trip. The rules are designed to prohibit untrained fliers from attempting ocean flights in planes not designed for such long-distance flying. It is not expected that Mattern will experience any difficulty here.

He will then go to the State Department to secure visas and passports allowing him to fly over the several countries in Europe along the route of the projected flight.

It is expected that Mattern will again team with his close friend, Bennett Griffin, who was his com-

POLICE SIFT DEATH OF SARA TEASDALE

Body of Famous Poet Found in Bathtub Filled With Water.

New York, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Sara Teasdale, one of America's best-known women poets, was found dead today in a bathtub filled with water in her apartment in a lower Fifth avenue hotel. She was 48 years old.

The body was found by Miss Rita Brown, a nurse, who had been taking care of her while she was suffering from a nervous ailment that followed an attack of pneumonia in London late last summer.

The nurse said Miss Teasdale had been depressed and had discussed with her methods of committing suicide, but had apparently been in better spirits when she retired last night.

The body was taken to the morgue for an autopsy to determine whether death was by drowning.

Miss Teasdale's body was found after her nurse, failing to find her in her room, began a search of the apartment. She had been dead only a short time. The water in the tub was still warm.

Miss Teasdale, in private life Mrs. Ernst B. Filsinger, was born in St. Louis and lived there until her marriage, in 1914. The nurse said she believed Mr. Filsinger is in Africa.

Her only surviving relative is a sister, Mrs. Joseph Wheless, of New York City.

Miss Teasdale had published two volumes of verse, "Sonnets to Duse," in 1907, and "Helen of Troy and Other Poems," in 1911, when in 1915 "Rivers of the Sea," by its popularity, established her as one of the country's outstanding women poets.

Among her other works were "Love Songs," 1917; "Flame and Shadow," 1920, and "Dark of the Moon," 1926. In 1917 she was editor of a volume of "One Hundred Love Lyrics by Women." She was a member of the Poetry Society of America and one of the American women's clubs of London.

Miss Teasdale was the daughter of John Warren and Mary Elizabeth Teasdale, of St. Louis.

Police listed the death as accidental pending an autopsy tomorrow by the medical examiner. Meanwhile a detailed report covering the circumstances and cause of death was withheld.

Navy to Establish Big San Pedro Base

Survey Ordered at Once to Give Nation Added War Security.

San Pedro, Calif., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Naval officers announced here today investigation of possible sites and costs for a base at San Pedro Harbor sufficient to handle the entire United States fleet, has been ordered by the Navy Department.

Immediate acquisition of a site in the harbor was recommended by Admiral Richard H. Leigh, commander in chief of the United States fleet, and acting favorably on his suggestion, the Navy Department has commissioned Rear Admiral T. J. Senn, commandant of the Eleventh Naval District, and Commander H A. Jones, new Naval Reserve chief here, to conduct the study.

Prime factors of the enterprise were given as enhanced security for the Nation in war, and economy and convenience for the fleet.

MAN SHOT IN FEUD OF LIQUOR RUNNERS

Three Alexandrians Seized; Conflicting Stories Are Told to Police.

A feud among Potomac River rum-runners which broke into gunfire yesterday, sent Edward Monroe, 21, of 732 North Columbus street, Alexandria, Va., to Casualty Hospital here with a bullet wound in his forehead, and resulted in the arrest of three Alexandrians.

Those under arrest in the shooting are Lewis Edwards, and Owen Crouch, both of 9 Washington street extended, both of whom are alleged to have attempted to steal liquor from Monroe, and Daniel Alexander, of 900 North Columbus street. The shooting took place on the grounds of the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, D. C.

From a maze of conflicting stories told by the wounded man and those under arrest, Detective Sergts. Carlton Talley and Thomas Sweeney early today were seeking to extract a cohesive story that would coincide with the physical evidence.

The stake in the fight was 52 cases of alleged whisky in a motor boat, moored in a cove near the Blue Plains

Unemployed Dispersed In Lithuanian Rioting

Memel, Lithuania, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Bitter fighting broke out today in the streets when police dispersed a throng of 1,000 unemployed who sought to hold a demonstration before the governor's palace.

Two policemen were wounded. They charged the crowd, wielding their clubs, and the mob stormed the Market Place before order was restored. The leaders were arrested.

Hull Is Skeptical Of Cabinet Offer

Tennessee Senator Is Too Busy, He Says, to Think of It.

(Associated Press.)

If Senator Cordell Hull, of Tennessee is under consideration by President-elect Roosevelt for Secretary of State he doesn't know it, and Mr. Roosevelt's associates here will not talk about his prospects.

The name of Senator Hull, veteran congressional expert on tariff and taxation problems, and former Democratic national chairman, has entered into the daily round of speculation over the make-up of the Roosevelt official family, but the 61-year-old Tennessean said yesterday he has been so busy with legislative duties that the new Cabinet hasn't entered his mind.

He is the fifth senator to be mentioned in the recurring gossip over the Cabinet—others being Senators Glass and Swanson, of Virginia, and Senator Walsh, of Montana, Democrats, and Senator Cutting, Republican Independent, of New Mexico.

Paraguay Claims Wings Of Offensive Destroyed

Asuncion, Paraguay, Jan. 29 (A.P.). The minister of war issued a bulletin today saying that Paraguayan forces in the Gran Chaco had destroyed the wings of a Bolivian offensive formation in the Fort Herrara sector and that Paraguayans had occupied an important position near Fort Nanawa (Fort Ayala).

CHINESE CHARGE LONDON-TOKYO SECRET TREATY

English Are Supporting Manchurian Program, Is Charge.

WILL OPPOSE POLICY OF NONRECOGNITION

Jehol Reports New Fighting; Kailu Is Bombed Again by Japanese.

Geneva, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—A spokesman for the Chinese delegation to the League of Nations said today they were convinced Great Britain and Japan had come to a "secret agreement" under which the British would support the Japanese program in Manchuria.

The charge followed reports from authoritative sources that Britain would oppose any declaration by the league of a policy of nonrecognition of Manchukuo, puppet state recognized only by Japan.

The British, it was understood, would oppose such a declaration in the projected recommendations on the Manchurian crisis in the report of the league's committee of 19, now being drafted. The British, it was said, maintain such a declaration might embarrass governments wishing to recognize Manchukuo in the future.

Convinced of Agreement.

Chinese leaders declared this opposition, plus the speech by Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, to the league assembly last week, had convinced them of the accuracy of reports of a secret Anglo-Japanese understanding, reached, they said, at the time of the Shanghai incident a year ago.

Apart from the nonrecognition clause, the Chinese indicated they were fully satisfied by the tone of the draft report, which probably will be finished tomorrow.

Japanese Bomb Town.

Shanghai, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Chinese dispatches today reported clashes between the Chinese and Japanese along the eastern border of Jehol Province, the advices saying the Japanese had again bombed Kailu, in northeastern Jehol, from the air.

One hundred houses in Kailu were reported destroyed and numerous persons killed.

It was further stated that Japanese infantry had attacked Fowhsin, in eastern Jehol, and had been repulsed by the Chinese with the loss of 250 men. This report, however, was believed to be exaggerated.

Considered Ill-Founded.

Reports that the Chinese had recaptured Chaoyang were considered ill-founded, since it was understood the Japanese had not occupied the city.

Meanwhile, rumors current that Marshal Tuan-Chi-Jui, former president of China, now was in Shanghai seeking to inaugurate Chinese-Japanese peace negotiations were increasing but the Nationalist government foreign office denied them, saying "such reports are propaganda."

Child Stolen

Along With Car and Both Are Found Mile Away After Search.

Seven-year-old Mary Eagleston dozed off in the back seat of her father's sedan last night as it rolled along to her grandmother's house. When she had gotten fully awake again, she was sitting in the bright, warm squadroom at the Ninth Police Precinct station and a kindly policeman was warming her hands with his.

The interim was a nightmare for Mary's mother and father and was a period of intense activity by police, because——

While Mary was asleep, the sedan rolled to a stop at 610 K street northeast, where her grandmother lives with Mary's aunt, Mrs. Alice Gregory. Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Eagleston, her parents, took the grandmother in the house, leaving Mary asleep. They were going to be gone a moment.

Fifteen minutes later Mary's parents came out. A car was parked just about where they had left theirs and it looked like it. So they got

GANG INVADES FETE FOR BUSCH HEIRESS

Only Firearms Are Taken by Thugs With Designs on Luncheon Guests.

St. Louis, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—A band of about a dozen robbers, some of them armed with machine guns, was frustrated today in an attempt to rob wealthy guests at a prewedding luncheon party for Miss Lily Busch Magnus, great-granddaughter of the late Adolphus Busch, founder of the Busch Brewery interests.

Two of the robbers entered the home of George S. Tiffany at Chesterfield, Mo., where the party was to be held, at 6 o'clock this morning. They attacked Tiffany when he resisted, then overpowered him and trussed him up with picture wire. After the two leaders had entered the Tiffany home, two automobiles bearing eight or ten additional robbers, some armed with machine guns, entered the Tiffany garage, where an employe was bound and gagged.

Three hours later an employe of the Bridlespur Hunt Club arrived at the Tiffany home, and he also was bound. A short time later the robbers, apparently fearing a search would be started for the club employe, abandoned the robbery attempt after forcing Tiffany to open the safe in his home. Tiffany said they obtained nothing in the safe.

So far as could be learned tonight, the only loot taken by the robbers was five shotguns and a rifle.

Police believed the gunmen planned to rob the luncheon guests as they arrived at Tiffany's home.

The engagement of Miss Busch to Arthur B. B. Preece, huntsman for the Bridlespur Hunt Club, was announced recently. Many wealthy and socially prominent St. Louisians had been invited to the luncheon, which was postponed because of the robbery attempt. Guests for the luncheon were scheduled to begin arriving about 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Tiffany is president of the Bridlespur Hunt Club.

In the scuffle before he was overpowered, Tiffany was struck and kicked by the robbers until he was unconscious. After the two leaders had overpowered him, four other of the gunmen entered the home and began laying plans for the robbery.

Two Families Claim Man, In Mental Lapse 22 Years

Tennessee Woman Surrenders Husband as Two Identify Him as Their Long-Lost Brother and Father of New Jersey.

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Tearfully, a frail little woman today released her husband, who claims to be suffering from a 22-year lapse of memory, to a wife and two grown sons in New Jersey, whom he mysteriously left years ago.

The man, tall and gray-haired, was identified at police headquarters by L. C. Allen, of Chester, N. Y., and Roscoe Allen, 36-year-old real estate dealer of Ridgewood, N. J., as their long-lost brother and father, Edgar G. Allen.

At the same time Mrs. Ted Morris and her 13-year-old daughter, Dolores, of Madisonville, Tenn., embraced him and claimed him as husband and father.

Witnesses said the man immediately recognized L. C. Allen as his brother, identified pictures of scenes and relatives at Bridgewood, but only looked blank when his Tennessee wife and daughter hugged him and pleaded for recognition.

After it was definitely established that he was both Ted Morris, an automobile mechanic and salesman of Madisonville, and Edgar G. Allen, of Ridgewood, N. J., the two families held a conference with police authorities.

Safety Director Walter C. Anderson announced that Mrs. Morris agreed that her husband should return to New Jersey with his brother and son to be placed in a sanatorium for rest and mental observation. He said the New Jersey relatives agreed to give the Tennessee wife reports of his condition and also aid in taking care of his little girl.

Mrs. Morris said she and her husband were married in Atlanta in 1912. Their daughter, she said, was born in Bowie, Tex., in 1919.

The man told officers he was walking along a street here Thursday and suddenly remembered his name to be Edgar G. Allen. He sent a message to his sister in New Jersey and the investigation followed.

ROOSEVELT-LINDSAY ACCORD IS REACHED FOR MEETINGS HERE

Daladier Selected To Seek Cabinet For Paris.

HE VOTED FOR PAYING DEBT

May Be Able to Get Accord in Sending Sums.

Paris, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Edouard Daladier has been picked as the strong man by President Lebrun to master the turbulent Chamber of Deputies and dissipate the clouds of unrest and disorder throughout the country.

Daladier, who was minister of war in the cabinet of Premier Joseph Paul-Boncour which was swept out of office yesterday by a defiant Chamber, today accepted the invitation of the president to attempt the formation of a new cabinet.

He is the biggest figure since former Premier Edouard Herriot in the ranks of the Radical Socialists. This group, with its membership of 160, is the largest party in the Chamber.

If he is successful in forming a cabinet, in which it was believed he also would take the post of minister of interior, he must face a budget badly unbalanced, with a daily deficit of $1,250,000, and the shadow of a debt default.

Voted for Payment.

Daladier's position on the debts question is believed to be sufficiently vague to enable him to bridge the gap between default and a resumption of payment. As a minister in the cabinet of former Premier Herriot he voted for payment of the debts, but in party councils he expressed reservations.

His reported intention to ask a decree of power is worrying the Socialists, whose support he is seeking. They fear that if they refuse he will form something akin to former Premier Poincare's national union that operated with almost dictatorial methods.

Offers Post to Blum.

Daladier talked today with M. Paul-Boncour and M. Herriot and then

Farm Hand Kills Two Brothers and Himself

Moline, Ill., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Apparently deranged, Henry W. Harkcom, farmhand, today shot and killed his two brothers, Thomas and Charles, and then killed himself. Authorities said they could find no reason except insanity to explain the triple slaying.

Thomas, with his family and Charles, had called on their brother at the farm. Relatives told officers Henry called his brothers upstairs, where both were mortally shot. Henry fled outside and shortly afterward was discovered dead in a woodshel.

Long Will Reply To "Propaganda"

Lying and Vituperation Are Charged by Senator From Louisiana.

(Associated Press.)

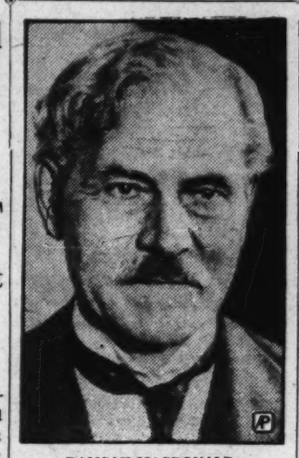
Senator Long, of Louisiana, said last night he would reply on the floor of the Senate today to the "propaganda, lying and vituperation" which he charged had been circulated against him.

While members of the special Senate elections investigating committee were planning another trip to Louisiana to look into the Broussard-Overton election contest there, Long announced that he would avail himself of the privileges of the floor. Overton was backed by Long and elected.

In a statement which he dictated to newspapermen, he asserted that he had charged "and it has never been denied" that "more than one million dollars was spent in the effort to defeat me for the United States Senate and $85,000 per State senator offered in an effort to buy my impeachment while I was governor."

Farmers Seek Recall Of California Governor

Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 29 (A.P.). Leaders of the California State Grange said today a petition seeking recall of Gov. James Rolph, jr., on the general charge of "incompetency" had been approved by Grange attorneys and would be rushed to the printers tomorrow.



RAMSAY MACDONALD.

ROOSEVELT INVITES MACDONALD TO TALK

Lindsay Said to Carry Bid for Early Parley; Premier May Come Next Month.

London, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—President-elect Roosevelt is extending an invitation to Premier J. Ramsay MacDonald to come to the United States to discuss economic and disarmament problems some time in the very near future, it was learned in unofficial but reliable quarters today.

It was learned that the invitation will be extended to the premier through Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, who conferred with Mr. Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., today. Lindsay is due to reach London early next week for a brief conference on debts.

The invitation was said to have been decided upon by Roosevelt with a view to reaffirming the policy of Anglo-American cooperation set up during MacDonald's last visit at Washington, when he discussed armaments with President Hoover.

This policy of close cooperation between these two greatest English-speaking powers was seen threatened by animosity growing out of the war debt crisis. This animosity, it was feared, may grow into open economic warfare if the war debt question is not solved amicably.

There was some suggestion that the meeting might be rushed, in which case MacDonald might proceed to Warm Springs next month.

Speed was seen as essential by persons in close touch with the Government here, due to the sudden outbursts of feeling on both sides of the Atlantic over the war debts situation.

London, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Tentative arrangements which Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to the United States, has made with President-elect Roosevelt for beginning the Washington debt negotiations early in March will meet the full satisfaction of the British government, it was indicated in Whitehall tonight.

The hope has been that the debt discussions would start at the earliest possible moment.

Sir Ronald's announcement concerning the debt situation had not been received at the foreign office tonight, it was stated, but it was expected in time for tomorrow's cabinet meeting.

It was not anticipated that the British government would have any difficulty in sending its mission to Washington even as early as March 1. Final arrangements and, in all probability, announcement of the personnel of the mission will await the British Ambassador's arrival in England and his conference with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald.

Treasury and foreign office officials have been at work for a fortnight preparing the British case to put before Mr. Roosevelt.

Young Unavailable For Cabinet Post

Sends Roosevelt Word on Strength of Reports of Consideration.

New York, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—A special dispatch from Washington to the New York Times says Owen D. Young, who has been prominently mentioned for Secretary of State in the Roosevelt Cabinet, has written a letter to the President-elect at Warm Springs, Ga., informing him that he can not be considered for a Cabinet position.

The dispatch continues:

"This information was made known here today by Democrats in the confidence of Mr. Young. According to them, he was prompted to send such a message to Mr. Roosevelt, now making up his Cabinet, because he understood that the latter had seriously discussed him for Secretary of State with leading Democrats with whom he had consulted about Cabinet timber. It was emphasized that Mr. Young had not received an offer of the post."

Satisfactory Talk Held on Plans For Sessions.

THREE HOURS' CONVERSATION

Sir Ronald Is Hopeful Nations Can Make Views Coincide.

Warm Springs, Ga., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—In the seclusion of a cottage atop Pine Mountain, President-elect Roosevelt and Ambassador Lindsay of Great Britain reached a tentative understanding today for the March meetings on war debts and plans for world-wide economic recovery.

Two sentences scratched out on paper in pen and ink and handed to newspapermen by Sir Ronald Lindsay as he departed hastily on his way to London gave the world the only announcement from the two statesmen. The note read:

"The British Ambassador and Mr. Roosevelt have had a wholly informal and unofficial but very satisfactory conversation concerning tentatively the arrangements for the coming meeting in Washington. It is hoped that it will be possible to start these meetings early in March."

No Direct Reference.

Fully conscious that the eyes of the other world capitals were focused upon them, Roosevelt and Lindsay made no direct reference to war debts and the economic conference over which there is an apparent conflict between the two countries on procedure.

The fact that the statement referred to "meetings" rather than a meeting was interpreted by some here to mean that Mr. Roosevelt's desire for separate negotiations on debts and economics still stands.

Asked if the statement assumed that England would send a representative to this country to discuss debts and a delegation at the same time to consider separately the economic situation, as Roosevelt proposes, Sir Ronald replied, "Oh, is that so? I know nothing about it."

Will Sail for London.

With that he stepped into a waiting automobile and sped for Atlanta to board a train. He sails for London on Tuesday.

The President-elect let the scribbled statement speak for itself and canceled plans for a press conference.

The unprecedented meeting between a President-elect and the official spokesman of another country occurred in the "little White House"

Woman Admits Seeing Texas Deputy Killed

Childress, Tex., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Officers said tonight Mrs. Ida Hunsucker, Quitaque, Tex., tourist camp operator, reported in a statement she had witnessed the killing of Deputy Sheriff Joe Brown in Rhome, Tex., Friday by two men, who had forced her with pistols to provide them with a motor car for a trip to Fort Worth. Mrs. Hunsucker said she did not know their names.

She was arrested on a highway today by deputy sheriffs after prisoners in the county jail noticed that license numbers on her car corresponded to those on the machine which sped out of Rhome after the shooting of Brown.

FALLING CURRENCIES HURT U. S. FARMER

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Describing depreciated currencies and arbitrary control of foreign exchanges as the principal obstacles to the recovery of American farm prices, the United States Department of Agriculture forecasts another year of depressed commodity values and burdensome surpluses during the crop year 1933-34. The official annual "outlook report" compiled by the department, in cooperation with extension economists representing 32 States, emphasizes the prevailing "disorganized currency systems" throughout the world as a factor bearing more heavily, perhaps, upon the American farmer than upon any other economic group.

"There is little prospect at present," it concludes, "for an early improvement in the foreign demand for our agricultural products" until the restoration of normal exchange machinery paves the way for an appreciable revival of international trade.

Called Recovery Aid.

"Effective international action this year directed toward facilitating international payments, the stabilization of currencies and the moderation of trade barriers would give a strong impetus toward economic recovery throughout the world," the report adds. But until effective action in this direction is realized, prevailing extraordinary surpluses of wheat and cotton will continue to bear down American farm prices to distress levels.

The department's report, released last night, has attracted particular attention on Capitol Hill this year, because it comes at a time when Congress is struggling with the problem of depreciated currencies in relation to an American tariff system which recently has ceased to offer any degree of protection to American industrial production.

It is not unlikely that the fundamental unity of interest between the agricultural sections and the industrial States on this world problem, as revealed in the farm outlook report, may hasten a constructive American policy on proposals to reestablish sound currencies abroad.

Meanwhile, Republican leaders in the House are prepared to press this week their demand for emergency tariff revisions to stem the influx of goods from depreciated currency countries.

Democrats Resisting.

Speaker Garner and Democratic Leader Rainey are resisting vigorously these proposed tariff adjustments, which would repudiate much of the antitariff oratory of the presidential campaign. At the same time, they recognize that protection against cheap foreign moneys is daily becoming a more urgent demand in all sections of the United States. The economic aspects of the present critical situation are clearly grasped by these leaders, but the political ramifications of the problem appear at the moment even more distressing.

A showdown on the Democratic policy now is promised for February 13, when the House must vote on the Crowther resolution to adjust American tariff rates in every case, so as to discount currency depreciation abroad.

A number of Democrats signed the petition last week to discharge the Ways and Means Committee on this bill, and it is the belief of some party leaders that, once it is forced to the floor, the measure will be passed, with considerable Democratic support.

Might Aid Gold Standard.

Although this proposed rectification of the American tariff would not bear directly upon the agricultural distress emphasized in the Agricultural Department's outlook report, it may have a far-reaching indirect influence upon farm prices. In the first place, the shutting out of cheap-money imports from the American market would serve as a powerful incentive to foreign governments to reestablish sound currencies. Secondly, real protection at home, say the advocates of the tariff readjustment, would tend quickly to restore American employment and trade, thus stimulating the domestic demand for farm products.

Serious inquiry into the depreciated currency problem has convinced leaders of both parties on Capitol Hill that one of two roads must be selected quickly if the long decline in commodity prices is to be checked short of complete economic collapse; either America must organize her economic life on the basis of extreme national self-sufficiency, through effective tariffs, or she must enter the deadly and destructive world competition in depreciated currencies, which would involve eventually the abandonment of the gold standard in this country.

This is the real decision which must be made, either in this session of Congress or the next. President Hoover recently has repeated his plea for American self-sufficiency, pending the restoration of world economic order through the projected international conferences on money, exchange and trade barriers.

Crop Surpluses Remain.

Despite three years of campaigning for drastic acreage reduction in the principal American crops, the Agriculture Department's outlook report does not anticipate any considerable reduction in the world wheat surplus next year. Declining consumption everywhere and increased production in Australia and the Argentine have more than offset American curtailment. There is now a world surplus of approximately 700,000,000 bushels of wheat available, with annual world production running at precisely the normal level of consumption. The report suggests that this surplus might disappear within two years after normal machinery for international trade is restored. But until the surplus is lifted from the market, there can be no real recovery of prices.

A similar situation prevails in cotton. The world supply of cotton for the current crop year, ending next August, is slightly more than twice the total world consumption for the crop year 1931-32.

"The market outlook for commercial vegetables this year is reported to be even less favorable for producers than the situation during the past two years," the outlook report continues.

Increasing production, or shorter demand, is evident for cattle, sheep, hogs, wool, potatoes, tobacco, dairy products, chickens, eggs, oranges and grapefruit.

Spitale and Bitz Arrested In 1932 Gangland Murder

Irving Bitz, left, and Salvatore Spitale, New York underworld "ig shots," who figured in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, were arrested today in connection with a gang murder committed last August.

Two Agents for Lindbergh Yield Loaded Guns in Chinatown Raid.

New York, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Salvatore Spitale and Irving Bitz, the two characters of New York's underworld who figured in the Lindbergh kidnaping case negotiations, were arrested today, accused of engineering a gangland murder committed last August.

The two men were taken in custody in dramatic fashion as they sat, at 4 a. m., in a little cellar cafe in Chinatown. They were in whispered conversation at a table when three detectives, each carrying a pistol, walked in. The place is known as the "Blue Devil."

Spitale and Bitz were forced to elevate their hands in the presence of other patrons of the place. A search of their persons netted two loaded revolvers.

At police headquarters they were booked on charges of homicide in connection with the slaying of Antonio Fontanio, who was known as "The Champ." Fontanio was found shot to death, lying in a Mott street gutter last August 25.

While Spitale, by reputation, is supposed to have extensive interests in night clubs, speakeasies and upState real estate, Bitz is a lesser figure, known to police as Spitale's lieutenant.

Their names became familiar to the entire world last spring when the Lindbergh kidnaping case reached a crucial stage. Morris Rosner, a former Federal agent, suggested the services of Spitale and Bitz as intermediaries and Col. Lindbergh agreed, appealing to the kidnapers of his son to deal through the gangsters. This scheme, however, brought no results.

Both Spitale and Bitz will be in the police "line-up" tomorrow and will be arraigned later in the day. They were ordered held without bail in Tombs Court today.

PRESIDENT IS RULED AS NOT TAX EXEMPT

(United Press.)

The Internal Revenue Bureau ruled yesterday that the President of the United States must pay a Federal income tax under provisions of the revenue act of 1932.

As stated, the ruling affects salaries of Federal officers and employes, including the salary of the President and Federal judges taking office after enactment of the revenue act last June. Therefore, it would not apply to Mr. Hoover.

However, officials said they assumed all Presidents had been paying income taxes regularly despite absence of a specific ruling on the subject. Although President-elect Roosevelt probably would pay the tax regardless of his status, they explained, the new ruling makes such payment compulsory.

Under the new decision, only persons having insufficient income or receiving compensation from a State or its political subdivisions for governmental service are exempt from Federal income tax.

Likely to Be Challenged.

This ruling has been made despite a Supreme Court decision handed down on June 1, 1920, in which it was held that the salaries of Federal judges are exempt from income tax.

Internal revenue officials last night admitted that their ruling probably will be challenged and again taken to the Supreme Court.

Justice Department officials said they believed the Supreme Court would hold the ruling unconstitutional if a case is taken to that body.

The Supreme Court's decision on the exemption of Federal judges was in the Evans vs. Gore case. Walter Evans was a Federal judge in Kentucky and J. Rogers Gore, acting collector of internal revenue. The Supreme Court ruled, however, that "apart from his salary, a Federal judge is taxable on his income or property the same as any other person."

Number of Judges.

At present there are 190 Federal judges, 151 district judges who receive $10,000 each a year, and 40 circuit judges who receive annual salaries of $12,500. Only a few of these judges were appointed after the revenue act of 1932 was enacted.

An estimate of how much the Government will receive in income taxes from Federal judges, provided they pay in accordance with the Internal Revenue Bureau's ruling, is at best a guess. It would be difficult to estimate their returns, due to the impossibility of knowing the amount of allowable deductions, other sources of income, and the normal and surtax income rates which would apply.

Presidents, it is understood, always have paid income taxes on their salaries.

BARBARA HUTTON.

San Pedro, Calif., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Denying she was engaged to be married to Count Emanuele Borromeo-D'Adda, of Rome, Barbara Hutton, 19-year-old heiress to the $50,000,000 Woolworth fortune, sailed late yesterday for Australia, leaving the count on the pier.

He had no statement to make after her departure, but beforehand he had stated that he considered he and Miss Hutton were "informally betrothed."

Miss Hutton arrived in Los Angeles with Mrs. Morley Kennerley, wife of a New York publisher. At the pier Count Borromeo-D'Adda handed the heiress a large envelope. She declined to accept it, and he walked on board with her. They spent fifteen minutes in conversation before the boat sailed.

"I'm not going to marry any one," she said. "That's straight and final."

DEMOCRATS TO BAR LONG BEER HEARING

Serve Notice on Smoot They Will Oppose Lengthy War of Words.

(Associated Press.)

Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee yesterday served definite notice on Chairman Smoot that they would oppose to their utmost hearings on the beer bill which would further delay possible enactment.

Aligning for what may be a decisive move to drive modification of the Volstead act through the present Congress, the sponsors gave warning that they would demand a vote on the hearings proposal.

Chairman Smoot plans to begin taking testimony today. Secretary Mills will appear before the committee to present the Treasury's estimate of revenue to be raised through the revised Collier-Blaine bill, to legalize 3.05 per cent beer and wine.

The Democrats do not object to Mills' testimony, but are determined that the hearings shall not be opened to friends and foes of prohibition for another battle of words over the wisdom of the Volstead act.

Dry Leaders Want to Talk.

Smoot said he had several applications for hearings on the beer bill from friends as well as opponents of prohibition and that he would permit any "new" testimony from those who had not appeared before other committees.

Virtually all the applications on file with his committee, however, are from dry leaders who have appeared already before other committees considering the legislation.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, joined Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, ranking Democrat on the committee, in voicing opposition to the hearings. He took the view the bill had been referred to the finance committee only for a study of its taxation features.

With the beer bill the very keystone of their revenue plans, the Democrats were anxious to hear Mills' estimate of what the bill would raise. He testified before the House committee that the bill as then framed to permit 3.2 beer, but not wine, would raise from $125,000,000 to $150,000,000.

Wine Value Doubtful.

There is some dispute among tax experts whether the addition of wine materially would increase the revenue.

The prohibition controversy was developing likewise on two other fronts, with Senator Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, planning an early move to bring up his repeal resolution in the Senate, and Senator Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, preparing a campaign to restore the cuts made by the House in enforcement funds and authority.

Blaine plans to move for consideration of the repeal resolution as soon as the Senate disposes of the pending Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill.

Sheppard announced Saturday he would ask the Senate Appropriations Committee to restore the enforcement funds, which the House cut in the Justice Department supply bill, and provide for continuation of the Prohibition Bureau's authority to employ undercover agents for purchases.

ORGANIZATIONS ASK WOMAN IN CABINET

Plea Sent to Roosevelt Is Signed by Presidents of Six Groups.

(Associated Press.)

The feminine desire for a woman in the Cabinet, long a conversation topic, was crystallized yesterday in a memorial to President-elect Roosevelt, signed by the presidents of six women's organizations.

Dispatched to Warm Springs, Ga., from Washington, where several of the groups have national headquarters, the memorial read:

"The undersigned executives of national organizations with a total membership of approximately 5,000,000 women would welcome the appointment of a qualified woman in the President's Cabinet, irrespective of political party or geographical location.

"Composing almost half the electorate of the country, women have contributed loyal service in times of war and peace.

"The appointment of a woman in the Cabinet would be an inspiring recognition of the part women have played in building the Nation, and of their right to complete political equality."

The organization presidents who signed the memorial were:

Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the National Council of Women.

Mary E. Woolley, president of the American Association of University Women.

Geline MacDonald Bowman, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Shirley Farr, president of the Women's Overseas Service League.

Clara Keck Heflebower, president National League of American Pen Women.

SOVIET RECOGNITION IS SCORED BY GREEN

Labor Chief Says Lowering of American Wage Level Would Result.

(Associated Press.)

The American Federation of Labor was declared by its president, William Green, yesterday to be uncompromisingly against recognition of the Soviet government by the United States.

Green asserted, in a 700-word statement, that an intensive drive for such recognition was under way, and charged that may advocates "are influenced by a purely commercial spirit."

It was argued, Green said, that trade would be increased and a market for manufactured goods stimulated and enlarged by recognition of the Soviet government.

"Labor is not influenced by such an argument," he said. "The masses of the people realize that trade is based upon a reciprocal relationship. If more manufactured goods are sold to Russia, we must, in turn, buy more from them. That would mean that labor in the United States would suffer through the importation of goods produced and manufactured by Russian labor under intolerable conditions of employment and at an indefensible low rate of wages.

"This is clearly evident through the shipment of Russian anthracite coal, which is being transported and sold in Philadelphia, Boston and other ports at a price much less than the cost of production of anthracite coal in eastern Pennsylvania.

"In these days of widespread unemployment it might appear that labor would be the greatest beneficiary of an increased and enlarged foreign market for American goods. In some circumstances this would be true, but in the matter of trade with Soviet Russia American labor would be called upon to surrender vital American principles and American traditions in exchange for an opportunity to market a small percentage of increase in American products."

FORD PICKET RANKS THINNING AT PLANT

Strike-Breakers to Move In Today, Protected by Bombs and Clubs.

Detroit, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Thinning ranks of strike pickets tramped sullenly around the Briggs Manufacturing Co. plant tonight as the labor trouble which has deadlocked the Nation-wide Ford automobile industry neared a crisis.

The Briggs company, which supplied bodies to Ford, announced it would employ strike-breakers to take the place of such of the old workers as would not accept their new wage terms.

State troopers, sheriffs' deputies and Highland Park police armed with riot clubs and tear gas bombs were mustered to protect those who wished to work.

Strike leaders declared they would attempt to balk any large-scale resumption of operations.

The strikers said late today that a new demand for higher wages would be presented to Briggs executives tomorrow.

They reported that the joint strike committee formulated a new wage scale at noon today. The strikers will return to work if the company accepts the new scale, leaders said. They refused to divulge details of the new scale.

Heretofore it was believed the only differences remaining between the company and strikers related to recognition of the strikers as an organized labor group.

The Briggs company announced that effective Monday at noon it will replace the vacant places with strike-breakers. Ford officials indicated they might either place their idle men in the Briggs plants, where they own the dies and tools, or start the manufacture of their own bodies as an independent operation.

Due to the elasticity of the Ford organization officials were of the opinion that they could resume operations within six hours after bodies again are started in production.

DALADIER CHOSEN TO FORM CABINET

offered Leon Blum, leader of the Socialists, participation in the cabinet. The Socialists will decide tomorrow what their attitude will be. If the Socialists refuse, Daladier then will turn to the moderates.

While the politicians were conferring with taxpayers in Lyons, Nice and Quimper staged demonstrations similar to those which were held in Paris yesterday. The demonstrators came in conflict with police in Lyons and Nice. Another mass meeting has been called in Paris tomorrow.

Herriot said he had told Daladier that he was entirely devoted to his proposed ministerial combination and to him personally. In the ensuing negotiations, he said, "I will seek the best method of being useful to him and will make the maximum effort to aid him."

Herriott Seen as Choice.

Echo de Paris will say tomorrow that M. Daladier likely will offer the post of foreign affairs to M. Herriot, but that it was believed Herriot would decline because of his stand on debts. In case the Socialists refuse collaboration, the newspaper hinted that Francoise Pietre, who has held posts in several cabinets, might be offered the position of minister of finance.

Daladier is 49 years old. His wife died recently.

Daladier said tonight that he hoped to announce the personnel of his cabinet tomorrow.

FISCAL BILL SPEED PLANNED IN SENATE

Chamber Has Passed None; Only 30 Days Remain; House Adopts Five.

(Associated Press.)

A determined effort to leave the extra session of the new Congress free to grapple with emergency measures by passing as many appropriation bills as possible at this session is ahead this week for Senate Democrats.

But along with zeal for speed will move plans for drastic curtailment of each supply bill.

The House already has passed five of the nine big bills to carry on the Government's multitudinous operations in the next fiscal year, but the Senate has yet to dispose of one.

With but 30 working days left, the Senate, therefore, must show more speed than in the recent past if it expects to send many of these vital measures to the White House before March 4.

Today it resumes work on the Treasury-Postoffice bill, with the highly controverted sections dealing with Government reorganization and a 10 per cent pay cut for Federal workers due for decision later in the week.

Will Seek to Get Vote.

Either today or tomorrow, Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, will try for a vote on his resolution instructing the appropriations committee to cut all future supply bills as far as practicable without impairing necessary functions.

This proposal was drawn and agreed upon at a Democratic conference last week after an original resolution of the Marylander was dropped as impracticable. He first sought a slash of approximately $500,000,000 in appropriations and the sending back to committee of the Treasury-Postoffice bill.

The modified program of the Democrats includes, also, efforts to reduce appropriations on the floor if the committee does not alter them downward far enough.

McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, will try to reduce the Treasury bill by more than $40,000,000 by curtailing the funds for ocean and air mail contracts and by cutting the $50,000,000 lump sum for public buildings by 50 per cent.

Fight Over Dry Funds.

Reserved for later in the session is a fight, now just beginning, over the House cut in prohibition enforcement funds, involving about $700,000.

The House will begin consideration of the billion-dollar supply bill for the independent offices tomorrow, with passage expected by the end of the week. After disposing of this it will have but three major appropriation bills to pass upon. They are for the Navy Department, the legislative branch, and the District of Columbia. During the latter part of the session a second deficiency bill is to be reported to take care of the emergency appropriations.

The House today is slated to vote on whether to extend the 1-cent a gallon gasoline tax for another twelve months.

Lindbergh to Be Asked To Attend Celebration

Paris, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will be invited to attend celebrations in Paris May 21 commemorating the sixth anniversary of his transatlantic flight from New York, it was announced today.

The invitation will be extended by the National Aeronautic Federation. The decision was reached after consulting the foreign office and Ambassador Walter E. Edge. Benjamin S. Connor, a director of the federation, will sail for New York Wednesday to convey the invitation.

People can take advantage of your offer the same day it appears in a Post Classified Ad. Phone National 4205.

Illinois Will Request $6,535,030 R.F.C. Aid

Chicago, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, and M. J. O'Connor, deputy comptroller of Cook County, today left for Washington to seek a loan of $6,535,030 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to continue relief work in Illinois next month.

Repealist Is Handy Victor at Houston

Vote for Eagle and Bryan Six Times That for Dry Supporter.

Houston, Tex., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Joe H. Eagle, 63-year-old Houston Democrat and World War veteran, goes back to Congress from the Eighth Texas District.

Eagle, prohibition repealist and advocate of payment of the soldiers' bonus, was elected by a landslide yesterday to fill the unexpired term and the coming long term of the late Representative Daniel E. Garrett, the final unofficial tabulation of returns showed today.

The tabulation gave Eagle 23,030 votes; Chester H. Bryan, Houston banker and former county judge, likewise an advocate of prohibition repeal, 6,579, and Robert L. Cole, who appealed for united "dry" support, 5,572.

ACCORD ON MEETINGS REACHED BY ROOSEVELT AND LINDSAY

overlooking this remote woodland section. They had luncheon together and were alone for most of three hours.

Overhead, Army planes droned a spectacular maneuver. Outside, the automobiles of tourists stirred the dusty roads as this hamlet became for a day the heart of the world with a meeting carrying the hopes of a new economic period.

Interviewed by Press.

Sitting on the rail of the cottage porch of Will Moore, where he spent the night, Sir Ronald freely parried question and answer with newspapermen before he drove at 11 o'clock with Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to Mr. Roosevelt, to the luncheon conference.

In that interview he emphasized a conflict of views between the two countries on procedure over the war debts relief asked by Great Britain.

"There are a large number of economic questions," he said, "on which the United States and Great Britain could not come to a decision by themselves. We are mighty fine fellows. We are not the whole world. We are perfectly willing to discuss war debts alone. Of course, if America wants to bring in other things she may."

He was somewhat doubtful if Prime Minister MacDonald would be able to represent Great Britain in debt talks with Mr. Roosevelt in March.

Bargaining Is Seen.

Beyond disclosing that he intended to link the economic conference negotiations with any relief to be given England and the other debtors on war debts, Mr. Roosevelt has not showed his hand. It appears obvious he intends to do some bargaining. It also appears obvious that the British in limiting the scope of the economic conversations merely to discussion rather than to agreements have a double intention in mind, avoiding too definite a bargaining and assuring the other European powers of no iron-bound alliance with the United States on the debts and economics.

But just what occurred at today's private conversation at the "Little White House" beyond what was formally announced will have to be learned by events.

Called home by his foreign office, Sir Ronald will deliver personally the views of Mr. Roosevelt before the British debts and economic emissaries go to Washington in March.

He was invited here by the President-elect through the State Department after it became known by Mr. Roosevelt that the Ambassador was departing next week.

Sir Ronald spoke hopefully to newspapermen about the forthcoming world economic parley, saying with a smile, "We expect to turn the tide and resume the path to prosperity."

Asked if there was not a pointed difference of opinion between the two countries about the debts and economics, he replied, "There is a very decisive divergence of views, especially when you get down to brass tacks."

"Can you straighten these out?"

"We will make a good effort," he replied.

Roosevelt Is 51 Today; Party Planned Tonight

Warm Springs, Ga., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Surrounded by his family and intimate political advisers, President-elect Roosevelt will celebrate his fifty-first birthday tomorrow night at an informal party in the family cottage.

Mrs. Roosevelt came here from New York for the birthday. Mrs. Anna Dall and Elliott Roosevelt, of the children, will be at the table. Other guests include James A. Farley, national party chairman; Louis M. Howe, political secretary; Frank Walker, party treasurer; Edward J. Flynn, secretary of State of New York; and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morganthau, Jr., of New York.

The meeting of the official political family of Roosevelt also is expected to afford opportunity for a last-minute check-up on some of the thousands of Federal appointments to be made by the President-elect.

Chamber Groups Indorse War Debts Curtailment

(Associated Press.)

Curtailment of war debts owed the United States has been approved by member organizations of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Announcing yesterday the result of a referendum on five proposals, the chamber said its members approved, 1,834 to 89, a proposal that further postponements of payments on governmental debts due the United States should be authorized by Congress on a temporary basis in the case of debtor nations showing inability to make present payments.

The members indorsed recommendations that modification of existing debt agreements should be conditioned, first by gurantees by debtor countries that American goods would have access to their markets on fair competitive terms, and second, upon reduction in expenditures for armament.

By a vote of 1,826 to 44 proposals for the United States to cancel war debts were rejected.

CHILD, 7, STOLEN AND FOUND LATER

in. Suddenly they realized it was the wrong car. Their car was gone. And so was Mary.

Frantic with anxiety, Mr. and Mrs. Eagleston called police. The lookout for the car with the missing child in a few seconds had scores of radio police cars alert in both the District and nearby territory.

An hour passed. Things looked ominous. Mr. Eagleston and friends scoured the neighborhood. They thought maybe the thieves might put Mary out a distance away so as to evade early pursuit. They also were fearful because of the bitter wind that the child might freeze before succor arrived in the event that the car was left in a deserted spot.

Worried Family Group.

A worried family group gathered in the parlor at Mrs. Gregory's. Neighbors offered advice and sympathy. Occasionally, the telephone would ring, bringing a tingle of apprehension and hope. But it was only the police, asking a question, or a newspaper reporter.

An hour and a half passed. An hour and three-quarters. Strained expressions appeared on everybody's faces.

Then a tinkle of the telephone. It is answered.

"Mary is found!"

Privates K. M. Young and R. A. Williams, in Scout Car 91, had spotted the Eagleston sedan at Eleventh and G streets northeast, a mile away. And Mary was inside, just awakening from her sleep and half-realizing something was wrong.

When she saw the blue-clad rescuers, she began to cry. She was so cold and stiff. And two men, she said, were walking away from the machine when she had opened her eyes.

In the warmth and light and safety of the police station, Mary felt lots better, and didn't cry any more.

Her mother, obviously immensely relieved, arrived with her father in a few minutes, and what will remain an adventure throughout Mary's life was over.

The Eaglestons live at 646 Hamilton street northwest. Mary goes to school at St. Gabriel's, Grant Circle, where she is in the first grade and where she will probably be the center of considerable attention today.

Neighborhood Is Scoured.

Police searched the neighborhood throughout last night for suspicious characters. They were confident the abductors of the little girl had not seen her peacefully asleep, and had been frightened considerably when they saw her and realized the search that would be made.

Before going home, the child's parents took her to Casualty Hospital, where she was given treatment to ward off ill effects of her chilling exposure. Physicians were confident she had suffered no harm from her experience.

The ignition on the Eagleston car is turned on by a switch and not by a key. This facility in starting the type of car is believed by police to be responsible for its selection by the thieves.

ALEXANDRIA MAN WOUNDED IN FEUD OF LIQUOR RUNNERS

landing. While Moore and Alexander were unloading the liquor from the boat, Monroe said, Edwards and Crouch approached in a small motor boat and boarded the craft, opening fire upon them.

After the shooting, Monroe ran along the grounds of the Blue Plains Home, and was met by William H. Thorne, assistant superintendent of the home, who took him to Casualty Hospital, where an operation was performed in an attempt to save his life.

On the other hand, Edwards and Crouch told police a story of the hijacking of liquor by Monroe and Alexander. They admitted they carried a shotgun and a .32-caliber automatic. Crouch confessed he fired a shot from the shotgun over the heads of Monroe and Alexander as they rowed across the river with some of the hijacked liquor.

The bullet extracted from Monroe's head was from a .32-caliber automatic. Crouch admitted the .32-caliber automatic was his property, but said he had not fired it. The automatic, he said, was thrown into the river.

The alleged assailants asserted the charge from the shotgun was fired while they were pursuing Monroe and Alexander across the Potomac, while Monroe and Alexander claim the shooting was done on the District bank of the river.

There were further conflicting stories told as to the ownership of the alleged liquor, with each pair making countercharges of thievery. Another somewhat puzzling angle to the case is the tale of Crouch, who claims the ownership of the large motorboat from which the liquor was being unloaded.

Mr. Thorne, who aided Monroe on the way to Casualty Hospital, said he heard one shot fired and went out on the grounds of the home and saw Monroe running toward him. He stopped at the Eleventh Precinct station, on the way to Casualty. Patrolman H. L. Pearson questioned Monroe for a brief period and he named Edwards and Crouch as his assailants.

He refused to disclose the identity of his partner, who later was identified as Alexander. His alleged assailants were arrested by Alexandria police on information from the Washington police. They were brought here and imprisoned in the First Precinct Station.

HONOLULU AWAITS 'ATTACK' FROM SEA

All Oahu Is Armed to Teeth as "Enemy" Approaches in War Maneuvers.

Honolulu, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Grim-looking guns—their muzzles threatening, but their breeches empty—pointed seaward tonight in readiness for an "attack" on Honolulu fortifications.

An expected air attack from the "black" fleet, steaming from San Diego, will demonstrate as definitely as unloaded guns can establish whether an enemy advancing on the Pacific Coast could first silence and destroy America's mid-Pacific outpost.

Although Hawaii's part in this year's Army-Navy maneuvers will be of short duration, military authorities regard it as significant. They pointed out an enemy bent on attacking the western mainland could ill afford to leave untouched this base, from which United States forces could launch a counter attack.

Tonight every defense force on Oahu Island was secure and alert as the war games officially began.

The Army's newest antiaircraft guns—which officers believe will keep attacking planes at altitudes where bombing aim would be haphazard—were anchored at advantageous spots, their muzzles trained skyward. The valleys of Oahu's mountainous terrain echoed the drone of patrolling night fliers and searchlights gashed the skies.

Ten thousand troops, who moved out of Schofield Barracks into the field Friday, lay hidden in clumps of trees and fields of brush and gulches sheltered huge field guns, dragged into position by tractors. They were so securely hidden as to be undiscernable beyond a few yards. Every post on 24-hour duty.

Generally discounting a night raid, military officials believed a dawn attack tomorrow or Tuesday was most probable. They pointed out the "enemy" aircraft could hope to accomplish little by "dropping" bombs at random during darkness, and the necessity of lighting decks of aircraft carriers for returning planes would make them easy targets for defense aircraft.

Family Still Silent With 2 Leas Missing

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—The reported absence from Nashville of Col. Luke Lea and Luke Lea, jr., was still unexplained today as members of their family remained silent. They are under conviction in Asheville, N. C., of bank law violations.

Reports that they had surrendered or been arrested Friday in the remote mountain county of Pentress were denied by Sheriff J. M. Peavyhouse, who said he did not even know the Leas and had no papers for taking them into custody.

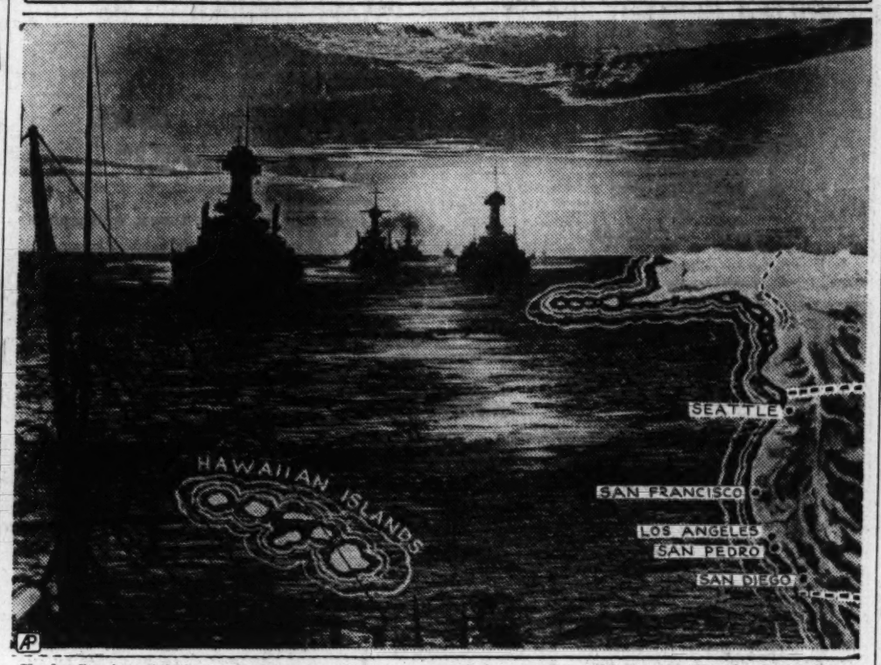
NAVY "ATTACK" ON WEST COAST TO TEST DEFENSE



Uncle Sam's mightiest warships are being prepared for an "attack" on the Pacific Coast in a 10-day war game in which not a shot will be fired, except on paper. Starting from a point between the Hawaiian Islands and California the "black" fleet will seek to overcome the "blue" defending ships in engagements over which an umpire will preside and chalk up hits and misses. Some of the important cities in the coast area from Alaska to Mexico are shown.

COMMENT SCARCE ON PACIFIC FLEET

Japan's Naval Maneuver Is Regarded as Gesture to Please Public.

(Associated Press.)

Japan's announcement of elaborate naval maneuvers this year in waters around the small islands under its control in the equatorial Pacific provoked little comment in Washington official circles.

While the naval minister's choice of the southern maneuver location generally is looked upon as a response to the concentration of the American Pacific and Atlantic fleets at Honolulu for the annual Pacific war games, it is regarded by State Department and naval officials as a gesture designed primarily to please the Japanese public.

Admiral Repeats Denial.

Admiral Osumi reiterated the denial of Japanese spokesmen at Geneva that his government is fortifying its mandated islands in the Pacific, the Mariannes, Carolines and Marshalls, which lie on the route from Hawaii to Guam and the Philippines, and said improvements there are merely for commercial purposes.

Japan's attitude toward these former German islands, as well as that of some of the other allied powers toward their mandated territory, has caused the United States Government to make frequent statements concerning the terms under which mandates were granted. These statements have cited that the territories were not to be treated as spoils of war but as territories entrusted to more advanced governments with the idea of preparing them for self-government as soon as they are ready for it.

Britain Freed Iraq.

Iraq, the former Turkish domain which recently became independent after tutelage under Great Britain, was the first of the mandates to acquire membership in the League of Nations and take its place in the family of nations.

France has announced that it expects to release its mandate over Syria, another former Turkish territory, in a short time.

The United States refused to accept mandatory power over any of the territory taken from the central powers. In agreeing to let its associates in the war divide up the enemy territory in Asia, Africa and the Pacific, however, this Government took the position that it helped win the war and was entitled to a voice in decisions which change the status of mandated areas.

Montgomery Official Can Drive Once More

Lacy Shaw, president of the Montgomery County (Md.), Board of Commissioners, will be able to ride about the county on his various duties today. His automobile, which had been stolen in Silver Spring, was recovered last night by Montgomery County Policeman Joseph Nolte and Town Policeman Al Thomas, of Takoma Park, Md.

The policemen found the car abandoned on the road near Four Corners, Md. The free wheeling apparatus had been damaged and the gasoline tank was empty, but otherwise the car was not badly damaged.

Episcopal Leader's Last Rites Today

Rev. Dr. Hobart Smith, of Baltimore, Victim of Grippe.

Baltimore, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Funeral services for the Rev. Hobart Smith, D. D., dean of the clergymen in the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Maryland, will be held at 4 p. m. tomorrow at St. Thomas' Church, Garrison Forest.

The Rev. Dr. Smith died last night at his home, the Deanery, here. He was taken ill with grippe last Sunday after officiating at two services at Hannah Moore Academy, where he was chaplain.

The Right Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, Bishop of the Diocese of Maryland, will officiate at the funeral services, assisted by the Rev. Philip Jensen, rector of St. Thomas'. Burial will be in St. Thomas' Churchyard.

7TH DAY ADVENTISTS DONATED $1,902,888

120,259 Persons Contributed for Missions in 1932, Report Shows.

In spite of financial conditions, members of the North American Division Conference of Seventh Day Adventists contributed $1,902,888.41 for advancement of foreign missions in 1932, according to the report of W. H. Williams, undertreasurer of the foreign missions board, made yesterday. The constituency of 120,259 contributed a per capita of 30.4 cents a week.

The denomination maintains mission stations and churches in 141 countries, among 455 languages and has not recalled a single missionary because of lack of funds, despite the present financial situation. The total received shows a decrease of $474,135.37 in comparison with 1931, yet the sum given was four times as much as in 1912, when the dollar value was comparable with today.

The 12,863 members of the Columbia Union Conference, which includes Ohio, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, contributed $276,107.14, or 41.3 cents per week per capita. The Potomac Conference, which includes Virginia, District of Columbia and Montgomery County, Md., was highest of the conferences of the Columbia Union. It gave $77,617.93, or 56.7 cents per week for each of its 2,631 members. It also stood fourth of all North American conferences.

Of the entire amount donated to foreign missions, $1,068,442.15 was given through the Sabbath schools, or 56.15 per cent. A total of $519,087.09 was collected through the Harvest Ingathering.

UNIVERSITY OPENS SECOND SEMESTER

George Washington Classes to Begin on Wednesday; Dr. Marvin to Talk.

Registration for the second semester at George Washington University will open this morning, continuing through tomorrow. All registrants with the exception of law students, will register in Corcoran Hall between 9 a. m. and noon and 2 and 6 p. m. Law registration will be in Stockton Hall, the law school building, same hours.

Classes for the second semester will open Wednesday. Assemblies for entering freshmen will be held on that day at noon and at 5 o'clock, when the new students will hear orientation talks by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, and other university officials. Provost William Allen Wilbur will preside.

A further perfection of the junior college advisory system, effective with the opening of the new semester, is announced by Dean Henry Grattan Doyle. Each student will be informed at the time of registration of the name of the faculty member who has been designated as his adviser and will consult his adviser personally with regard to his program. An increase in the number of junior college advisers has been made so that each faculty member may have fewer advisees and may devote more personal attention to each.

Through the junior college advisory system care for the development of the individual student is maintained despite the magnitude of the university's enrollment, thus combining for the student the close supervision of his studies offered in the small college with exposure to the wider contacts and broad fields of knowledge afforded only by the large urban university. In the more advanced work of the senior college and graduate council, the faculty-student association develops naturally into the "master-fellow relationship between teacher and student which the university recognizes and fosters as the basic principle of college teaching."

In addition to undergraduate and graduate studies in letters and sciences offered through 48 curriculum departments, the university embraces professional training in medicine, law, engineering, pharmacy, education, government, library science and fine arts.

Quezon Condemns Freeing of Islands

Hawes-Cutting Bill Passed by Sugar Capitalists, Filipino Charges.

San Francisco, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, in a speech transmitted from Manila to San Francisco by short-wave radio, today assailed the Hawes-Cutting Philippine independence bill, passed recently by Congress over a Presidential veto.

Quezon attributed passage of the bill to the influence of American capitalists interested in preventing free entry of sugar from the Philippines.

He termed the transition period, during which immigration and export restrictions would be imposed, as an injustice, which would defeat the expressed intention of the measure to grant independence of the islands.

CARRIERS' DISPUTE IS PARTLY SOLVED

Rail-Highway Users' Report to Be Submitted to Committeemen.

New York, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—The clash of interests between America's two principal transportation competitors, the railroads and highway users, reached a partial solution today in the report of a joint committee representing both sides of the controversy, after three months' study of the problem.

The report will be submitted immediately to the national transportation committee, of which the late Calvin Coolidge was chairman.

Full agreement between the conflicting interests has been reached on questions relating to taxation, reciprocity, coordination of highway administration and grade crossing separations.

Dimensions Not Defined.

No agreement has been reached on rate regulation and the length and weight of vehicles engaging in interstate commerce over the Nation's highways.

Both railroad executives and leading highway users agree that "common carriers on highways should be under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commrece Commission, and should be required to obtain certificates of public convenience and necessity." The financial responsibility for all such companies should be established, the report says, for the protection of passengers, shippers and the general public.

Rate Dispute Still Rages.

The railroads and highway users differ sharply on the question of rate regulation, the former holding that "adequate requirements should be imposed, * * * to insure just and reasonable rates and proper inhibition against undue discrimination," while the latter stipulate that this should wait until sufficient data have been collected "to indicate the desirability of such regulation in the public interest."

On the other hand, the highway users agree they should abide by certain recommendations of the Interstate Commerce Commission providing that such companies shall be required to have a permit, liability insurance, open bookkeeping and financial records, and that they should make regular reports of their operations to the commission.

King Boris of Bulgaria Is 39 Years Old Today

Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—King Boris tomorrow will celebrate his thirty-ninth birthday.

The day will be marked by church services throughout the country. In Sofia a solemn mass will be celebrated attended by members of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps. There will be no military display afterward, but the population will be given an opportunity to sign the king's book at the palace, as a gesture of congratulation. The king himself probably will participate in the solemn mass service at the cathedral.

Poisoned Biscuits Kill Two; Four Ill

Carelessness of Father Is Fatal to Himself and Daughter.

Stamford, Conn., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Merle Nicholson, 40, and his 5-year-old daughter, Carrie, are dead, and four other children are ill as a result, officials said today, of the accidental mixture of plaster with some biscuits made by the father.

The girl died last night shortly after dinner. The father died several hours later. Helen, 4; Merle, jr., 9; Verlette, 11, and Georgiana, 6, remained in the hospital tonight. Physicians said they would recover.

Verlette said her father had been patching chinks in the home with plaster, which he mixed on the porcelain surface of the kitchen table. As he prepared dinner, in the absence of his wife, he mixed the dough on the table to cut into biscuits. Officials believe it became mixed with the residue of the plaster.

Kidnaping Charged To Motor Bandits

Watchman and Patrolman Abducted After Woman Loses $14,000.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Kidnaping was added today to charges against a bandit gang which robbed a woman bank messenger of $14,000, wounded the North Kansas City marshal, disarmed a possee and escaped in stolen motor cars yesterday.

Police here were advised Bert Conroy, night watchman, and John Newman, traffic patrolman, of Knoxville, Iowa, were abducted by four men, one wounded, who drove into the town last night in a coupe with a flat tire and asked their help in changing it. At a service shop, however, the men selected another car and drove off in it, with the officers as their prisoners.

Conroy and Newman were taken to a schoolhouse 10 miles west of Unionville, Mo., where they were locked up. The robbers continued their flight.

BRUENING HAS KEY TO GERMAN POWER

Republican Foes Make Open Threats of Strike in Berlin Situation.

Berlin, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Former Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's Centrists held the balance of power tonight while Franz von Papen continued efforts to find a parliamentary majority and form a cabinet to replace that of Chancellor Kurt von Schleicher which fell Saturday.

Meanwhile the Republican opposition openly flaunted threats of a general strike in the chancellor-designate's face.

Von Papen, who has headed the cabinet before as chancellor, spent his Sunday in discussion with political leaders and afterward conferred with President von Hindenburg, acquainted him with the latest developments.

Meanwhile the Wilhelmstrasse was in the throes of hidden, bitter ferment, with the various factions exhausting available methods in an attempt to reach the ear of the president. Republican spokesmen were divided in their bitterness between Von Papen because of his record and the east Prussian Junkers whose farm relief measures the Republicans call scandals.

Von Papen's program is to seek to get a majority through combination of the National Socialists, Adolf Hitler's party, the Nationalists, and the Centrists. In an attempt to bring this about he met with Hitler, but the results of the meeting were not made known. It was believed the meeting was the preliminary to a further conference.

With the 196 Nazi members, the 51 Nationalists and the 89 Centrists and Bavarians, Von Papen might find a majority in the Reichstag. The Centrists, by joining the 121 Socialists and the 100 Communists, also could form a majority.

The Centrists at this time were unprepared to support a dominantly Hitler combination, holding fast, it was reported, for iron-bound guarantees that the constitution would be observed.

Spoils Handbook Is 1933's Best Seller in Job Quest

600 to 700 Phone Calls Hourly Made on Printing Office With No Copies Available to Give Clews to 135,000 to 150,000 Patronage Places.

(Associated Press.)

Showing job-hunting Democrats where the manna is hoarded has become for members of Congress quite as acute a crush as the thousands of applications for places.

A determined run on senators and representatives in the last week has left them virtually without copies of the now famous booklet prepared by the Civil Service Commission listing some 135,000 to 150,000 patronage jobs.

Much to the annoyance of the Government Printing Office, which retained about 200 copies besides the two sent to each senator and a few extras, telephone calls for copies are pouring in there at the rate of 600 to 700 an hour.

The supply is so limited that seekers after the list find their search futile. Hundreds upon hundreds then turn to their members of Congress in a vain quest, while thousands from over the country write in for the list.

Senators, who are trying to keep their own copies for reference purposes, are beseeched for them. Just as an example of how scarce the supply is, Democratic Leader Robinson, of Arkansas, obtained only six copies of the 421-page document.

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, to help relieve the situation, has introduced a resolution providing for the printing of 5,000 additional copies, to be divided between senators and representatives. These would cost about $1,500, the printing office figuring the publication expense per copy at about 30 cents. Copies they sell bring 40 cents.

A GOOD REPORT
for the Thousands of Members of this Mutual Company

AT THE END of the third year of the depression the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company reports that it has easily met every claim and call during these years of stress and storm without borrowing a dollar or having to sell a single security.

Throughout this period the institution of life insurance has proved itself one of America's greatest economic assets.

Three factors, not available as a whole to business generally or to the individual investor, contribute to the soundness of the life insurance structure:

1. Uninterrupted cash income from renewal premiums and from interest on investments.

2. Diversification of investments, carefully regulated by statute.

3. A continuous trusteeship of funds invested in sound income-producing securities which can be held for maturity values.

During its business life of 89 years this company has maintained an unbroken dividend record. For many years every life and endowment policyholder has received an annual dividend larger than in the previous year.

This dividend allotment is continued without reduction for the year 1933, as dividends have been fully earned during 1932.

Ancient Stone Cities' Ruins To Be Sought in Honduras

Ruins of ancient stone cities in practically unexplored jungles of eastern Honduras will be sought by a Smithsonian Institution expedition this winter.

These ruins, the existence of which is known from the reports of natives and chicle hunters, lie nearly 300 miles south of the southern limits of the great Maya culture area where the highest of New World civilization was developed and in what is known to archeologists as the Chorotegan area. Here a civilization grew up long before the discovery of America by Columbus, which in some respects approached that of the Maya themselves, but lacked the more advanced features, such as an elaborate calendar and hieroglyphic writing.

But the Smithsonian archeologists have several clues which indicate that the ruins they plan to visit contain monuments with inscriptions. If this is true it indicates either a far removed Maya colony or a higher Chorotegan development than hitherto has been suspected. At present it is all a great mystery. This is increased by the fact that the precious metals and the turquoise from which the Maya made elaborate decorations are believed to have been imported from the Chorotegan country and probably from the very country which the party plans to visit.

This is one of the least known areas of the New World. It is covered with dense jungle which long since has hidden the ancient walls of the demolished temples and palaces. Only lumbermen have gone a little way along the Rio Patuca down which the Smithsonian scientists hope to make their way in canoes. They have been unable to find any trustworthy maps of the country. All sorts of courses are shown for the Patuca.

MATTERN, HERE, PLANS NEW WORLD FLIGHT

panion on last year's flight. However, no definite announcement has been made in regard to this as yet.

Mattern's plane has a cruising speed of approximately 150 miles an hour and is of the same type as the one employed by Post and Gatty on their record-breaking trip of 8 days and 15 hours.

On last year's trip Mattern and Griffin, both able pilots as well as navigators, took turns at the controls. By using this system they were able to cut down on the stopover time. Mattern intimated yesterday that this same principle would be employed again this year with the hope that the added flying time would be the factor which enabled he and his partner to break the Post-Gatty record. All of the flying on the Post-Gatty trip was done by Post while Gatty handled the navigation.

Mattern said that he hopes to make nine or ten stops on the trip. The longest and most dangerous hop, he said, would probably be between Irkutsk, Siberia and Nome, Alaska, a distance of 3,100 miles. He hopes that he will be able to make arrangements for a stop and refueling at Yakutsk, Siberia, which would break this long jump into two flights of 1,900 and 1,200 miles, respectively.

Home Fire Loss Is $1,000.

The home of J. V. Spaulding, of West Falls Church, Va., was partially destroyed yesterday by a fire which burned the upper story of his home, causing damage estimated at $1,000.

The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY

THANKS to Miss Ruth O'Brien, Textiles and Clothing, Agriculture, for information useful to all housewives and motorists who like to keep upholstery clean, whether it be in the living room or the family car.

Riley.

"Spots on automobile upholstery, like those on upholstered furniture," says Miss O'Brien, "require special treatment, since they can not be reached from the wrong side. Garments usually are cleaned by rubbing the spot with a solvent on the wrong side to force the dissolved dirt through the fibers to an absorbent pad underneath.

"Grease or dirt on the surface of any upholstery must be removed, if possible, without pushing it through the fabric or moistening the padding or lining. The Bureau of Home Economics recommends carbon tetrachloride for this purpose because of its safety. It can be bought by the pint or quart in drug stores. Gasoline is a fire hazard except when it can be used entirely out of doors.

"First, beat off any loose dirt with the flat side of a whiskbroom. Have ready plenty of clean nonlinting cloths, light or dark, according to the fabric to be cleaned. Apply the solvent with a soft white bristled brush in straight lines with even strokes and then wipe it off quickly with a clean cloth. Let the fabric dry. One application may be enough, or the treatment may have to be repeated. Work with a little of the cleaning fluid at a time in a shallow dish to prevent waste from evaporation.

"If the color is fast you can try soap and water. Make a smooth, soft jelly from high-grade white soap and when it is cold, apply some of it with a soft brush in even lines over as much space as can be wiped off quickly with a cloth or pressed off with a dull caseknife. Work so that the least possible moisture penetrates the upholstery. Remove the last traces of soap with clean cloths wrung out of warm water. Be sure the upholstery is thoroughly dry before you allow the car to be used or it will soil again very quickly. If the upholstery buttons have metal backs put a soft cloth around them as you work to prevent rust from the wet cleaning cloths."

This tip alone should save the reader the price of a year's subscription to the Federal Diary.

Date worth remembering—January 29, 1916—"He kept us out of war." This statement is credited to Woodrow Wilson himself. At Cleveland, Ohio, this date, he said, "You have laid upon me this double obligation: 'We are relying upon you, Mr. President, to keep us out of war, but we are relying upon you to keep the honor of the Nation unstained.'"

Who will be first to crash that new yellow metal safety zone marked at Pennsylvania avenue and Fourteenth street northwest?

Most any evening between 8 and 9 o'clock, weather notwithstanding, we see a Government employe reading while standing in the doorway of a cigar store at Fourteenth and F northwest. Who is he?

* * * *

WITH the five-day week urged for the Federal service by organized labor, which is battling for the shorter work-week throughout industry, some concern has arisen among Government workers about the exact way in which it will be applied. Some are fearful that it will mean salaries reduced in proportion to the reduction of hours, while others have anxiety over other possible harmful effects of the plan.

To keep the record straight, the American Federation of Government Employes, through its president, John Arthur Shaw, put the matter up to President William Green of the American Federation of Labor for a "ruling," and the reply that Green made should make it clear that Federal employes will have nothing to lose when the time comes for a concerted effort to cut another half day from their working time.

"There need be no apprehension among Government employes regarding the attitude of the American Federation of Labor toward the application of the five-day week to Government workers," Green wrote Shaw. "It is our opinion that the five-day week should apply to Government employes without any reduction in pay."

GREEN said that "this attitude assumed by the American Federation of Labor is fully justified because we believe that the standard rates of pay accorded to Government employes should apply in all fairness to a real, genuine five-day work week. I can appreciate fully that the five-day work week for Government employes on a reduced earning basis would be of no advantage whatsoever. Our fight must be to secure for Government employes the five-day work week and at the same time maintain the standard rates of pay."

With proposals of further pay reductions echoing and reechoing through the official atmosphere in Washington, however, talk of the five-day week may seem premature. But those who are well informed on the organized labor attitude look upon the five-day week as an ultimate objective with much to be done beforehand in rescuing the much-slashed pay check of the Government worker. All of which prompted Mr. Green to add, "Of course, all this involves our determination to fight for the restoration of the rates of pay and conditions of employment which were taken from Government employes through the enactment of the economy act."

ONE purpose of fighting for reduced working hours is, of course, the making of more jobs and easing up on unemployment. However, there is no intention on the part of the A. F. of L. to urge Federal personnel expansion at the expense of those already on the rolls. President Shaw of the A. F. G. E. is authority for the emphatic statement that neither his organization nor the A. F. of L., with which it is affiliated, ever will advocate the addition of employes unless it be at the "standard scale," as they say in labor circles.

It is interesting to recall that Federal employes first joined hands with the A. F. of L. in a controversy over working hours. Some sixteen years ago there was an attempt to add one hour to the Government employe's day when the now famous Borland amendment was proposed and passed by Congress. It was the venerable Samuel Gompers, then president of the A. F. of L., who led the fight against it and succeeded in obtaining Woodrow Wilson's veto of the measure.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 29 (Special).—At an early hour this morning Washka discovered Columbus peaceful in its post-midnight slumbers. Washka, on his way to Washington, D. C., trying to get there in time to attend the Federal Diary grand ball at the Shoreham Thursday, rounded a sharp turn in the road. He banked for the turn and there was no bank. He leaned so decidedly to port that his droopy ears scraped the hard pavement. Sparks sprouted and Washka's ears were severely burned.

The turn in the road is like this.

However, the scorches will be healed before reaching Washington, for Washka is thoroughly air-cooled.

Installment five of Washka in the Diary's jigsaw puzzle is shown here:

ATTEMPTS to interpret economy to mean still lower salaries for Federal employes will be "nothing short of willful neglect of duty on the part of our national leaders," declared John Arthur Shaw, president, American Federation of Government Employes, in a statement yesterday calling upon Congress to exert its leadership to restore national confidence.

With proposals for further reducing Federal salaries still pending, Mr. Shaw made a direct and emphatic appeal to Congress to "stem the tide that is carrying our national life toward shoals of still greater distress and dispair." His statement, in part, follows:

"Refusal by Congress to accede to demands that Government salaries should be reduced further will be notice to the American people that this Nation has dropped its defeatist attitude and that Congress is willing to exert its leadership in guiding the country back to normal times. If the national legislature stands by the opposition some of its leaders have voiced against additional pay cuts, it will go far toward restoring national confidence.

"Nothing could be more disastrous at present than to have the Federal Government interpret economy to mean lower salaries for its workers. It will be nothing short of willful neglect of duty on the part of our national leaders, when the workers of America are looking to Washington for action that will stem the tide that is carrying our national life toward shoals of still greater distress and despair."

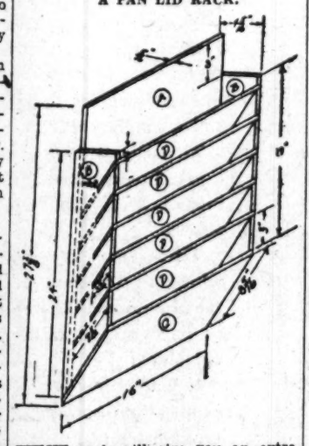
A PAN LID RACK.



THE cook will give you an extra piece of cake if you make this pan lid rack for her. The following pieces of lumber needed to make this rack may be obtained from an old packing case:

One piece 5-16 by 15 3-8 by 27 1-16 inches for back (A). Two pieces 5-16 by 4 5-16 by 24 inches for ends (B). One piece 5-16 by 8 5-16 by 16 inches for bottom (C). Five pieces 5-16 by 7 1-2 by 16 inches for partitions (D).

Shape ends (B) as shown. Then cut five slots at an angle of 30 degrees with the vertical, as shown. These slots should be cut 3 3-4 inches deep, one-half the width of partitions (D). Then cut a piece 3 3-4 inches long, 5-16 inch wide from each end of partitions (D). Nail sides (B) to (A). Nail bottom (C) in place. Slip partitions (D) in place in the notches in sides (B). The rack may be hung on the wall or secured to the inside of a cabinet door.

Dimensions and proper locations of homes for 27 different species of birds will be found in the booklet, "You Can Make It for Camp and Cottage," published by the National Committee on Wood Utilization.

WOMEN'S DEFENSE CONFERENCE OPENS

800 Delegates Expected to Attend Sessions at Mayflower.

Activities of the eighth Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense starts today at the Mayflower Hotel with committee meetings and registration of delegates. More than 800 delegates from every part of the country, representing 38 women's patriotic organizations, are expected. The conference will open at 8:30 tonight with a mass meeting in the hotel ball room.

Meetings of the rules committee, Mrs. Doris B. Merryman, of Toledo, Ohio, national president of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, chairman, and the credentials committee, Miss Charlotte C. Aycrigg, of Ridgewood, N. J., representing the Daughters of the Revolution, chairman, are scheduled for 9 o'clock this morning. The resolutions committee will hold its first meeting at 10 o'clock under the chairmanship of Mrs. G. L. H. Brosseau, of Greenwich, Conn., representing the Rhode Island Association of Patriots.

Conference Board to Meet.

The conference advisory board, composed of Mrs. Virgil Stone, of this city, national president of the American War Mothers; Mrs. Russell C. Langdon, of Detroit, national president of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy; Mrs. Noble Newport Potts, of this city, president of the National Patriotic Council, and Mrs. Gilbert Leslie Lewis, of Rochester, N. Y., president general of the National Society of New England Women, will meet at 1 p. m. today. A meeting of the extension committee, Mrs. S. Alford Blackburn, of Versailles, Ky., national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, chairman, is called for 2 p. m.

The mass meeting tonight will open with a concert by the United States Marine Band. Following a processional in which the colors of the participating organizations will be advanced to the platform, the conference will be formally called to order by Mrs. Blackburn, chairman. The invocation will be pronounced by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, and a salute to the flag will be led by Mrs. Reuben Ross Holloway, of Baltimore, representing the Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America. Mrs. Blackburn will welcome the delegates in a brief address, to which Mrs. Merryman, second vice chairman, will respond. "The Star-Spangled Banner" will be sung by Mrs. Louise Allison, of Washington.

Legion Chief to Speak.

Louis A. Johnson, of Clarksburg, W. Va., national commander of the American Legion, will make the first address, speaking on "Adequate National Defense—a National Necessity." Rear Admiral F. B. Upham, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, will speak on "Why a Navy." Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commandant of the Third Corps Area, will make the final address on "National Defense."

The conference will reconvene at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday for its second session. The third session will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and the final session at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday. The conference banquet will be held Tuesday night, with Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, of Milford, Ohio, first national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, as chairman, and Alvin M. Owsley, of Dallas, Tex., past national commander of the American Legion, the speaker.

Editor and Merchant Hurt in Auto Accident

Senatobia, Miss., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Malcolm Lawrence, 35, editor of the Grenada Sentinel, was fatally injured, and J. H. Harris, 44, Holcomb merchant, was hurt near here today when their car ran through a highway railing and plunged down an embankment.

Both Lawrence and Harris were appointed recently by Gov. Connor to serve on the Roosevelt inaugural committee. Lawrence also was a member of the State Democratic executive committee.

Mrs. M. F. Barnum Weds W. R. Gordon

Ceremony Is Performed at Kensington School by Rev. F. Kullmar.

Mrs. Mildred Fonda Barnum, proprietor of the Bradford Home School at Kensington, Md., was quietly married to Walter Richard Gordon, of New York City, Saturday night, it was learned yesterday. The couple will be at home in Kensington after February 15. They will remain at Kensington until June, when the school term is ended, and then will go abroad. On their return they will make their home in New York.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frederick Fullmar, pastor of Warner Memorial Presbyterian Church, Kensington, at the school. There were no attendants. A buffet supper followed the ceremony. The marriage had been scheduled for February 8.

Mrs. Gordon is well known in Chevy Chase, where she conducted the school for four years until a few months ago when she moved the school to Kensington.

Singer Wed

Lillian Roth Is Married to Municipal Justice in New York.

LILLIAN ROTH.

New York, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—With many well-known figures from Broadway and the political world in attendance, Lillian Roth, musical comedy singer, was married today to Municipal Court Justice Benjamin Shalleck. The ceremony was at the Savoy Plaza, with Rabbi Bernard Birstein officiating.

After a month's honeymoon in Florida, the couple expect to reside in New York.

It was Miss Roth's second marriage, and when she and Judge Shalleck applied for their license recently there was a momentary delay while officials reassured themselves concerning the Mexican divorce she obtained from her first husband, William C. Scott, wealthy son of a Pittsburg lumberman.

After the corporation counsel's office looked into the matter it was decided the divorce was valid and the license was issued.

Miss Roth married Scott in Atlanta, Ga., in April, 1931, after the death of her fiance, Herbert Ochinsky.

Glebe Road Pedestrian Struck by Automobile

Struck and knocked down by an automobile as he attempted to cross Glebe road in Ballston, Va., early yesterday, Robert Saunders, colored, 41, of Alexandria, was brought to Georgetown Hospital and treated for severe injuries to the head.

Police said Ivan H. Prentz, 21, of East Falls Church, Va., was driving the machine which struck Saunders.

Hitler Attacked By Senator King

Elevation Would Hurt Reich, Other Countries, Church Group Told.

In his lecture to the Mutual Improvement Association of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints here last night, Senator William H. King, of Utah, discussed at some length the possible consequences if Hitler should take charge of the German government, and expressed the opinion that it would provoke convulsions within Germany and disturbances beyond the confines of that country.

The Utah statesman also defended the league's action in establishing the Polish "corridor."

In closing Senator King depicted the condition in Syria and Palestine and described his travels and experiences there.

Rabbi Isaac, recently returned from extensive study and research in Palestine, addressed the audience on the Jewish position in world affairs and their future with regard to Christianity.

WORLD PEACE SEEN AS DESIRABLE GOAL

Dr. Ignatius Smith, However, Admits Objective Is Still Far Away.

International peace is impossible of achievement unless greater effort is made to build up in the minds and hearts of men an internal love for and devotion to peace, the Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., declared yesterday in an address on the Washington Catholic Radio Hour, broadcast from the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

"There is no doubt," he said, "that progress has been made in creating a sentiment for peace and that it is real progress. But neither can it be doubted that the efforts have not been successful. Several wars are in actual progress at the present time in different parts of the world and a half dozen are in the making. No need to make this statement more definite since this is a sermon and not a lecture on contemporary history. South America and China are ringing with clashing bayonets and booming with the roar of cannon. Several nations of Europe are being constrained against their baser feelings, from declaring war against their neighbors. Ambitions for universal peace have not yet been realized. So far universal peace has been a delusion.

"Righteousness, justice, charity—these are the creators of personal peace, and peace in its turn creates them. Such peace rejoices in the successes of others as in our own prosperity; such peace disdains calumnies, forgives injuries readily, pardons offenses, promptly makes sacrifices of self-interest willingly and voluntarily, represses deceit masterfully and curbs intemperate and passionate impulses successfully. Call all of this virtue, call it righteousness, call it self-control, call it what you will. It produces peace. It is the only foundation for universal peace. It is the only factor that can save the hope for peace from constant delusion."

The services were under the direction of the Rev. Francis J. Hurley, pastor of the church, and included the blessing of the sick and the Lourdies procession. The music was under the direction of Harry Wheaton Howard, and included Florence Yocum, soprano, and Ann Arlen, violinist.

Central Announces Registration Dates

Full Courses in Commercial Work Among Those on Curriculum.

Registration for the second semester of the Central High Night School will take place between 6:30 p. m. and 9:30 p. m. Wednesday at the high school building.

Students desiring to transfer credits from other schools for advanced standing or who wish to discuss graduation requirements are advised to interview Mrs. Lawless in the school office during the second period, 7:37 p. m. to 8:44 p. m. Monday, Wednesday or Friday.

No classes in advanced languages with the exception of French 4, will be offered during the second semester, but German 1 and 2, Spanish 1 and 2 and Latin 2 will be part of the curriculum. French 1 and 2 also will be included. Courses in English, modern European and American history will be offered. If a sufficient number of students register for classes in modern European history 2 or business arithmetic 1, classes in these subjects will be started. Both beginning and advanced courses in journalism are available during the second semester. Full courses in commercial work are also a part of the Central curriculum, instruction being given in typewriting, shorthand and bookkeeping.

POST WANT ADS BRING QUICK RESULTS

Girls Who Enter Contest Early to Get Extra Prizes

Photographs Published Each Sunday by The Post Will Bring Total of $500 to Entrants; No Obligation Required.

Although selection of 51 girls, to be the queen and court of honor at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago next June, will be made from photographs submitted at any time up to and including Saturday, April 15, there is naturally a great advantage in entering the contest early, particularly to share in the distribution of $500 that will be made for pictures printed in the rotogravure section of The Sunday Post during the next nine weeks.

The first pictures of ten charming girl entrants in The Washington Post's search for a group of girls to represent a century of feminine progress at the great international exposition were published in The Post yesterday and each girl represented will receive $5 in cash. Pictures of ten other girls will be similarly published next Sunday.

The Washington Post has been officially authorized to conduct this search for charming girls by the Century of Progress Exposition, and from the 51 selected upon the basis of their photographs, three will be chosen to represent the queen and first and second ladies in waiting. In the order of their selection these girls also will receive $5,000, $3,000 and $2,000 in cash, respectively.

The entire group will be the guests of The Washington Post and the Chicago Tribune at the world's fair throughout the first two weeks of June. Their transportation will be paid to and from the exposition regardless of where they may live. Under proper chaperonage they will enjoy an elaborate program of entertainment and will reside at Chicago's finest hotels. In addition, they will be provided with beautiful apparel designed by leading modistes and paid for by these newspapers.

No penny of cost and positively no obligation is required to share in the opportunity to receive these great awards. Any unmarried girl, or her friends or relatives, may submit her photograph to the "Queen Contest Editor, The Washington Post" by affixing to the back of the photograph the transmittal coupon published elsewhere in this issue, or the same information written upon any other sheet of paper. It is not necessary to buy a single copy of The Washington Post. The search is not confined to Washington Post subscribers, but is open to every unmarried girl in the entire world excepting only professionals such as stage girls and artists' models and employes of the Washington Post and members of their families.

Who's Who in Washington?

$200.00 CASH PRIZES

You Know or Can Find the Names and Addresses of the Washington Firms Described in the Sketches Below

Read the Sketches! Send The Washington Post your Answers, as there is every reason why YOU should be in the list awarded a Prize for submitting the Correct or Nearest Correct Answers. Read and Win!

HEREWITH the readers of The Washington Post will find descriptive sketches of a number of the foremost business institutions of Washington. Nearly all details concerning these firms are supplied except the trifling one of the name and address, and familiar as most of the organizations have been made through the advertising columns and years of trade with all classes of people, the fun of supplying the names, addresses and other essential points becomes easy.

The supplying of the names, addresses and, when asked, the name of the product made or sold, or other information, in each of the paragraphs, will be required of the participants in The Washington Post's "WHO'S WHO IN WASHINGTON" CONTEST, which opens with the publication of these paragraphs. You take no risk, have nothing to lose, nothing to pay, but every chance of winning a part of the $200 IN CASH to be given the winners. There's no guess work, no catch, no hidden meaning; each sketch fits one Washington firm alone. Start now. The ones who submit the CORRECT or NEAREST CORRECT lists win until each of the cash Prizes is exhausted. START RIGHT NOW! SEE HOW EASILY YOU CAN RECOGNIZE THEM!

Prizes Will Be Awarded as Follows:

For the Correct or Nearest Correct List	$100
For the Second Nearest Correct List	$50
For the Third Nearest Correct List	$25
For the Next Nearest Correct List	$10
For the Next 10 Nearest Correct Lists, Each $1,	$10

After you have decided on the individuality of the firms in the following list, make out a list of your own with the name and address you have decided is the right one, following the number of the sketch which you think represents that firm. Write only on one side of the paper and make out your list in this manner:

No. 1 (Name of firm). (Address).
No. 2 (Name of firm). (Address).

And so on until completed. Any other additional information called for include just after the address. If no other information is required, give name and address only. Send the result to "Who's Who in Washington" Contest Editor, Washington Post, City.

The contest is open to any one (except Washington Post employes and their families) who cares to try, with no conditions of any kind except the sending of your answers to the "Who's Who in Washington" Contest Editor, Washington Post, City. No more than one prize will be awarded in the same family. No information regarding answers to this contest can be obtained from The Washington Post.

Answers, once submitted, can not be returned, nor can corrections or changes be made.

Ask any Washington firm which you think is represented if a description of their firm is included in "Who's Who." Or, if you are in doubt as to the description, call in person or phone them. They will be glad to tell you if they are in the contest.

The contest will close next Saturday at 6 p. m., February 4. On February 11 these sketches will be republished, with the names of the firms given with the sketches, their addresses, and other information if required, and a list of the prize winners.

In the event of a tie for any prize offered, a prize identical in all respects with that tied for will be given each trying contestant.

Three judges comprise the board which will decide on the correct or nearest correct answer, and all entrants in the contest thereby agree to accept the decision of the judges as final.

No. 2 Washington is the home of the world's largest carpet and rug cleaners! It is a company noted first, for its practical knowledge gained through over a half century of experience, and for its use only of the most modern and efficient machinery and methods which leaves a rug, when cleaned by it, sweetly clean, renewed in appearance, free of germs, dust and dirt. Too, its new fireproof plant, especially designed for rug and carpet cleaning, assures one of safety in handling and storage. And all of this you may enjoy at the lowest prices for quality cleaning. Since the answer to this is so obvious, state if it has a new rug and carpet sales department in which one may select from a full range of carpetings in plain colors or pattern goods of all widths?

No. 3 "Who's Who in Washington" would not be complete without the inclusion of this well and favorably known Men's and Young Men's Clothing business, whose fame is city wide . . . and more! Who doesn't know it! Tell you? Okay! It is a business made known generally by its Budget Plan which allows one to enjoy good clothes while conveniently paying for them, but, specifically, it has achieved familiarity chiefly through its Radio Program sponsored by ..... but that's telling you! You should know, for it has been on the air for 231 weeks. What and where is this store and its branches located? When and over what station does it broadcast? What two words personify the leader in its program? What down payment is required in using the Budget Plan of this business?

No. 4 There is an engraving establishment in Washington which is considered by all to be the leading house of its kind in the city. For many years it has produced a quality of workmanship in its own shop unsurpassed in design, good taste, individuality and, as may be attested by thousands, at a cost no higher than similar work elsewhere. It is a firm of producing engravers where engraving, both social and business, is a real art. Too, in its store are displayed the largest assortment of remembrance and greeting cards in Washington—you may choose from thousands! This establishment was founded in 1892 and bears the one word name of its directing owner. Which and where is it?

No. 5 Which Funeral Establishment in Washington, founded 1850, enjoys the unique distinction of having always been under the direction of its founder and his lineal descendants, thus assuring patrons of the tradition and experience which means so much in the direction of an appropriate funeral service. It has achieved a perfection in its service which price alone can not obtain, and yet there are those who feel its services are beyond their means. This can not be so, for records prove that of the last 1,000 funerals conducted by this firm, almost one-third have cost less than $300. One, therefore, need not be denied the service of this leading Funeral Director. It has no connection with any other firm in Washington.

No. 6 What firm of Sheet Metal Contractors and Gas Range Dealers and Distributors, established 26 years, located at 1802 Eleventh st. nw., and whose advertisement appears on page 171 of the classified telephone directory, specialize in the installation of air conditioning systems, skylights, guttering, spouting, warm air, hot water, steam and vapor heating for architects, contractors and individual home owners? Too, it repairs all makes of gas ranges, all types of heating plants, and all kinds of roofs. It is also known as the exclusive distributor in Washington of "The Most Beautiful Gas Range in America," models of which are now displayed in its windows and show rooms. It is "tomorrow's range for today's most modern housewife"—the range that is purchased by more users than any other! Now that this sketch is so easy of identification, and can't be missed, give in addition to firm name and address, the names of the two ranges displayed in the windows of the location given above. (No phone information.)

No. 7 What business and secretarial school, occupying the second floor of a building on a prominent street corner of Northwest Washington, is said to have the most ideally lighted and ventilated schoolrooms in the city; gives individual attention and instruction, making entrance possible at any time, and is known as "A Select School for Particular People?" In its day and night classes now forming for its mid-winter session, you will find the price of attendance to be on the lowest cost level consistent with efficiency, with a unique plan of assuring positions to its graduates. Where is this school located and who is the principal?

No. 8 There is an awning company in Washington at which only the best may be had—and still its customers pay only a just and fair price for its work. It entertains the capital idea that to merit your confidence, its awnings must be made of the grade of canvas you pay for, and that the hardware used in their erection must endure and "stay put." The style element essential to proper beautification through use of awnings is here well understood and always given. Thus, in the end, you profit most by patronizing this company . . . which is located on a prominent north and south thoroughfare and whose name, in part, is in this sketch. Which and where is it? Who is its proprietor?

No. 9 Ask any auto dealer, service station or garage man to tell you the firm known as "The Parts People," the largest organization of its kind in Washington, whose business is the supplying of automobile replacement parts, such as Perfect Circle Piston Rings, Champion Spark Plugs, Raybestos Brake Lining and over 300 other nationally advertised, standard makes of parts, service station and garage equipment. This company has recently supplemented its business with the addition of the distributorship of Atwater-Kent Radios, than which there is none superior and more generally accepted, where tone, reception, appearance, &c., are desired. Can you name a dealer who sells Atwater-Kent? And, of course, you can give the name and address of "The Parts People."

No. 10 The correct identification of this sketch may enable you to effect insurance savings even greater than the prizes given in the contest. What and where is the largest agency in Washington writing fire, automobile, plate glass and other forms of insurance at an average saving of 25 per cent to its policyholders? It represents a select group of Mutual companies, which have been in business an average of 51 years and which have total assets of nearly $83,000,000. It maintains its own loss department and effects prompt settlement of claims through its own office.

No. 11 Name and locate two stores of the same ownership which have been long famous for delicious Caramels especially, and for Bon Bons, Chocolates and other Candies likewise. These two shops should not be confused with any other, for each is a part of the original business and at each only may their Candies of old-time goodness be found. Since you will more than likely be in the shopping district during this contest, why not drop in and verify this sketch in person, enjoy the lunches served at either store, or order your favorite candy. And when you do, find out and give the year date in which the business was established. They'll tell you!

No. 12 This number pertains to a certain storage company founded in Washington in 1898. It specializes in local and long distance furniture removals, long distance hauling, packing, &c., and maintains an absolutely fireproof warehouse for the safe storage of household effects, rugs, draperies and other articles. Especial provisions are made for particularly precious things, such as heirlooms and silver. This company is an agent for Allied Van Lines, a Nation-wide organization of furniture forwarders, whose reputation is most trustworthy. Which company is it and where is it located? Does this company rent Invalid Chairs and folding chairs for individual, business and institutional use? (Better find out!)

No. 13 Number thirteen position in Who's Who is considered by some to be unlucky and it may be for you if, in locating the name and address which fits this sketch, your brakes fail to hold. Well, out Fourteenth street is a company which is an Official AAA Station for testing, adjusting and renewing your brakes if needed. Auto Brakes can not properly be adjusted by hand . . . here a faultless machine accurately records the action of each wheel—and each is adjusted in unison with the other. This firm k-n-o-w-s brakes, it e-x-p-e-r-t-l-y adjusts them and gives you certain knowledge your brakes will hold. It offers the famous Brake Lining whose name commences with "A" and ends with "C." What is this name? What and where is this company?

No. 14 This is the Washington organization which achieved success thru the use of the laundry method in which "the net gets the wear" "and the clothes get the wash," the "net result" being that your clothes get longer wear. And this service in the end costs not one cent more than you are now paying upon a given class of work! Surely you know it, or have heard its work praised by your neighborhood friends . . . but do you know that within the past year it has enlarged its service to include dry cleaning? It has . . . and it makes this unusual statement—"We guarantee, for your protection, not to shrink any fabric, not to fade any color, to shape garments expertly, to make minor repairs at no extra cost, to leave articles odorless." That is some guarantee to live up to . . . but it does it!! What is this laundry's name and address—its phone number?

No. 15 A business that survives nearly one hundred years must possess unusual ability to serve its customers and here is a coal company which has done it! Founded in 1835, it is known as Washington's Oldest Coal Merchants. It offers only the best grades of coal—slow-burning, heat-giving coals which are economical, clean and free of slate or dirt. This company maintains a Combustion Department thru which it advises its customers of the best coal for their individual needs, and how most economically to run their furnaces. Which and where is it?

No. 19 There is baked in Washington, by a strictly Washington Bakery, an unusually fine bread made only from the purest ingredients. Its most popular loaf is a ready-to-serve bread, sliced for your convenience; it is packed in a moisture-proof, waxed wrapper upon which is printed its name, composed of two words, the first commencing with "D" and ending with "S," the other with "H" and ending with "M." What is this name? A hint? Surely! It's baked by the same baker whose special pound cake comes to you wrapped in cellophane around which is a band of green and white ribbon paper bearing its name. Name the bakery, its address, and name one retailer who sells its bread or cakes.

No. 20 What is the name of and where is located that exclusive china store to which, since 1889, many Washingtonians and others have been going for the finest in decorated, hand-painted china? You'll find it not far from the city's main shopping street, just a few steps north. There is no other store in Washington comparable to it for here artists in china painting and decorating do the work on the premises, executing special orders when desired. Undecorated pieces are obtainable as well as supplies for those who make a hobby of this fascinating art. If the unusual, the beautiful is wanted, you'll find it here.

No. 21 What and where is the Ford Sales and Service Company, located west of Connecticut Avenue, that maintains the greatest floor space in order properly to display and service Ford pleasure cars and trucks? It is especially interested in service after the sale which in part accounts for its increasing business, yet its convenience of location draws many for it is easily accessible to all motorists. Everything necessary to Ford servicing may here be found with factory trained mechanics ready to give instant service. Its storage facilities and expertness in the repair and maintenance of all makes of cars, draw many motorists other than Ford owners to its shop. It is an official AAA Station. Who is the Manager of this organization? What is the price F. O. B. of the least expensive new Ford car sold here? It is suggested you call in person.

No. 22 In this number, you should not find it difficult to name and locate "Who's Who in Washington in Wall Paper and Paints." Here is a house that recently celebrated its Silver Anniversary, the house that "Sets the Styles" and is known as the largest wall paper merchants, not only in Washington, but in this section. In either of its two stores in this city one may find the best in wall papers, both imported and domestic—and a paper that will fit your purse. For distinction, variety of design, and a knowing service you'll surely want to locate this firm. Remember, too, that its papers are suntested and light resisting. They will readily cooperate with your decorator, contractor and painter on proper selections. It is also the Washington distributor of Lucas Paints, Varnishes and Enamels—100 per cent pure and water free.

No. 23 Within a block or so of the downtown shopping district, on a convenient southeast corner, is located one of Washington's finest Service Stations. From it is distributed, sold and serviced the "tire that never gets smooth," the tire that "makes a washboard road a boulevard." "How?" you ask. Simply this—In place of these tires being built with one tread alone, layer upon layer (two or three) of anti-skid tread is moulded upon the carcas or framework with the result that when one tread wears away another appears to give you continued safety and long wear. It is easily the safest tire ever built, and is fully protected by patents . . . so its qualities are exclusively to be found only in tires distributed from this One-Stop Service Station. What tire is alluded to? What is the name of the place that distributes it and their address.

No. 24 1933 marks the 90th year of this leading local bottler of carbonated beverages. . . . Their six flavors and Ginger Ale, both Golden and Pale Dry, were the first in Washington to be provided in full quart, 32-ounce bottles, with the label marked "Since 1843." LIQUOR LEGISLATION.

The liquor problem is to be attacked by three ways during the remaining 30 days of this session. The House has cut down the appropriation for enforcement of prohibition, leaving it at $8,440,000, a cut of $680,000, and prohibiting the use of any of the money for the employment of informers or for the purchase of liquor to be used as evidence, and also prohibiting wire-tapping as a means of obtaining evidence. Public sentiment approves of these prohibitions of prohibition evils, and will welcome an early showdown on the question of repeal itself. An effort to bring the repeal resolution before the Senate will be made. The third legislative proposal relating to liquor is the hearing before the Senate finance committee on the revenue features of the beer bill.

Senate drys will fight for a larger prohibition enforcement appropriation, and will try to strike out the House amendments barring secret agents, buying of liquor by these agents, and wire-tapping. Senator Smoot, chairman of the committee on finance, intimates that he will open the hearings to witnesses on all phases of beer legislation. As to the repeal resolution, it is expected that if it should come up for debate the late filibuster on the Glass banking bill will be eclipsed. The same prediction is made regarding debate on the beer bill.

Many States have repealed their prohibition enforcement laws. A curtailed Federal appropriation will make national enforcement a farce, especially in wet States. The prestige of the law would be conserved by prompt action on prohibition repeal, and by adopting or defeating the beer bill without delay. As the liquor problem apparently will not be disposed of at this session, an early extra session is all the more desirable, in order to shorten the period of anarchy that seems to be approaching.

Drys and wets who dread the danger of public disrespect for all law are anxious to reach a speedy final decision on the liquor problem. The failure of the eighteenth amendment in actual test has been accompanied by such growing disrespect for law that millions of drys are ready for a change, provided that the change will not include restoration of the saloon, with its system of "treating" and other incentives to drunkenness.

FRANCE'S FISCAL DILEMMA.

France is having as much trouble trying to balance her budget as is the United States. The situation which led up to the overthrow of the Paul-Boncour government closely parallels that which confronts the American Congress. France has a huge deficit. It is estimated that expenditures in 1933 will exceed revenue by 10,500,000,000 francs (more than $400,000,000) unless drastic steps are taken. Yet the Chamber of Deputies would not accept the tax increases and economies recommended by Finance Minister Cheron, supported as he was by Premier Paul-Boncour and former Premier Herriot.

In this country President Hoover and his Cabinet have pleaded in vain for a balanced budget. Congress has ignored the deficit because it fears that new taxes and budgetary slashes would be unpopular. It is not difficult for Americans to understand what took place in Paris when the same issue arose. The Socialists would not accept the higher taxes proposed by M. Cheron. The pleas of the administration were no more effective in halting the anti-tax stampede than they were in stopping the default on the French debt to the United States.

The French budget calls for expenditure of 53,500,000,000 francs this year, compared with 39,500,000,000 in 1927. A considerable portion of this sum goes for interest on the national debt. Strictly governmental expenditures have increased about 75 per cent in the last six years. Revenue has fallen in France, as in every other country, while demands upon the Treasury have been augmented at an alarming rate.

This situation is somewhat disquieting because of the refusal of the Chamber of Deputies to balance the budget. M. Cheron's program included both drastic taxes and economies. Since the chamber defeated him by an overwhelming majority, it may be assumed that the taxes will not be enacted and that the budget will go unbalanced.

The position of the franc is weakened by this turn of events. It is only a few years since France underwent a period of prolonged inflation. The people lost much of their savings before the franc was stabilized at about one-fifth of its former value. Remembrance of those days necessarily makes the people apprehensive lest another period of inflation is about to commence. Presumably a bond issue will be floated to bridge the gap between expenditures and available revenue. But if the new government should be unable to obtain money in that way, there would be no alternative to the printing of fiat money.

No government can allow huge deficits to accumulate year after year without incurring serious consequences. The economic position of France has been considered impregnable, but it will not long remain so unless the Chamber of Deputies has courage enough to balance the budget.

EARLY AMERICAN INFLATION.

Since the advocates of the various measures for inflation of the currency seem little disposed to consider the disastrous effects of contemporaneous experiences of other nations they might with profit look into the history of American fiat issues. Both the Revolutionary War and the Civil War witnessed inflation on a large scale, considering the population and wealth of the country during those periods, and the evils resulting were the same that European countries have experienced more recently.

The fiat issues of the Continental Congress and the States totaled about $450,000,000. Within three years after the Continental issues were in circulation they had so depreciated in value that they were replaced by a new issue at the rate of 1 for 40, and before another year had passed these notes were also accepted only at a heavy discount, the original issue falling as low as 1,000 to one silver dollar. Pelatiah Webster wrote of this money:

> Of all the contrivances for cheating the laboring classes of mankind none has been more effectual than that which deludes them with paper money. This is the most effective of inventions to fertilize the rich man's field by the sweat of the poor man's brow. It has killed more men, pervaded and corrupted the choicest interests of our country, and done more injustice than even the arms and artifices of our enemy.

The issue of greenbacks began in the second year of the Civil War. The decline in their value started the day they appeared. The price of the necessaries of life doubled and trebled when paid for in the fiat bills. And, as always is the case, everything went up faster than wages. In the last year of the war, when prices had increased nearly 125 per cent, the laborer was getting only about 50 per cent more than formerly. Dr. Richard T. Ely shows that it was seven years after prices had reached the top before maximum wages were paid. For years after any inflationary action the employer has all the best of it, selling at high prices and paying minimum wages for labor.

CHOOSING A PRESIDENT.

The twentieth amendment of the Constitution, abolishing the lame duck sessions of Congress, will become effective on October 15. It is a wise provision, so far as the abolition of lame duck sessions is concerned, but the changes which it makes in regard to the Presidency are full of possible danger. Only a few days are allowed for the organization of a new Congress before the date set for the inauguration of a President. During that brief interim the House must organize, the Congress must meet in joint session to canvass the electoral vote and declare the result, and in case of no election the House must elect a President and the Senate must elect a Vice President.

On several occasions the House has consumed two or three months in the effort to elect a Speaker. By stretching the point it might be possible for a Speakerless House to join the Senate in counting and declaring the electoral vote, but some of the individuals in the House might not be actual members of that body. If the election of a President should devolve upon the House before it is organized the validity of credentials would be challenged, and some time might be consumed in settling contests. But inauguration day would not wait. If a filibuster should arise in the Senate—which nowadays is the rule rather than the exception—the election of a Vice President would also be delayed. Inauguration day might arrive with no President or Vice President elected.

The amendment authorizes Congress to name persons upon whom the Presidency would fall in case of successive vacancies, but no provision is made to guard against the contingency of failure of the two houses to elect a President and Vice President before inauguration day. A law designating the persons qualified to fill a vacancy in the White House would have no effect in that event, since Congress has no power to name a President. That power rests solely in the House; and under the new amendment the House may not be in a position to elect a President when that duty falls upon it.

THE GERMAN CRISIS.

The fall of Chancellor von Schleicher will come as a surprise to most of the world. Germany had apparently accepted the firm rule, and it was taken for granted that he had the hearty support of President von Hindenburg. That the chief executive refused him authority to dissolve the Reichstag was an unexpected development.

The president has again commissioned Baron von Papen to form a cabinet that would have legislative support. The former chancellor has repeatedly failed in this attempt. His brief tenure was not marked with any particular brilliancy. It survived only because of the emergency powers entrusted to it by the President, and such strength as it had was largely ascribed to the influence of Von Schleicher as a member of the cabinet.

Baron von Papen is reported to understand full well the probable futility of any attempt on his part, with only the minor backing of the Nationalists, to secure the support of a Reichstag majority. He is said to have acknowledged to the president that this could only be secured by Hitler as the leader of the Nazis, whose party still has the largest representation, with nearly one-third of the Reichstag membership. Hitler's renewed demands for the chancellorship since his showing of strength in the elections in Lippe, have been insistent.

It seems incredible, though apparently true, that the great activity of the National Socialists undermined the position of Chancellor von Schleicher and caused the president to make one more effort to secure a constitutional government without admitting the Hitlerites to power. The Reichstag meets again on Tuesday. Von Papen has not much time for the formation of a satisfactory cabinet. Whether Hindenburg will again repose in Von Papen the emergency power he has just refused to Von Schleicher, or finally give Nazi leadership a trial, will be an interesting development of the next few days.

WHAT 16 TO 1 MEANS.

The farmers who are demanding enactment of a measure that would virtually double the price of wheat are modest indeed in comparison with the free silverites. It is not a coincidence that the bills for the remonetization of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 and other price-boosting plans are fathered by members of Congress from the western mining States. These measures are urged by the mining interests.

It is readily demonstrable that passage of the Wheeler 16 to 1 bill just defeated in the Senate, would immediately put more than $60,000,000 a year in the pockets of the silver miners. Silver today is selling as a commodity for less than 26 cents an ounce. An ounce of gold is worth $20.67 and one-sixteenth of that is $1.29. Thus it is plain that a law establishing the rate of 16 to 1 would increase the price of silver more than 400 per cent. The net profit to the silver miners would be more than $1 an ounce for every one of the 60,000,000 ounces mined each year.

None of this ever appears in the arguments for the free coinage of silver. The necessity for it is always placed on the lofty ground of the benefits that would come from expansion of the currency. Never a word is heard, either, of the ruin and demoralization that inflation of the currency brings to countless more individuals than can possibly be benefited. The Glass banking bill is now in the House, where it is again threatened with inflationary riders by Representative Goldsborough. Since his price-fixing scheme through inflation passed the House at the previous session, there is danger that it might be again adopted as an adjunct to a sound banking bill. Such action would probably spell the doom of banking legislation at this session in view of the three-to-one vote in the Senate. It is sincerely to be hoped that the House will recognize the necessity of the Glass measure without further delay and avoid burdening it with monetary nostrums that have no chance of becoming law.

PACIFIC TREATIES

From the New York Globe.

Behind the maneuvering in Geneva and Tokyo over the best "face-saving" way of disposing of the League of Nation's ill-fated conciliation program the basic realities in the Far Eastern situation stand out more clearly every day. In this country especially should we realize that it is not Japan's violation of the Kellogg pact or her defiance of the league which is the most important aspect of her present policy, but her repudiation of the nine-power treaty which in guaranteeing China's sovereignty had supposedly established an international order in the Far East, definitely removing the rivalries and suspicions of the nineteenth century.

Further than that, this country must recognize the danger to the whole body of treaties signed at the Washington conference in this unilateral and forceful rejection of one of them. Together these treaties have constituted a closely woven fabric of international engagements for the maintenance of the status quo throughout the Pacific, and it is a serious question whether they must not stand or fall together. It is significant that the league's permanent mandates commission found it necessary at its last meeting to secure from Tokyo a denial of reports circulated in some newspapers that Japan, contrary to her treaty engagements, was fortifying certain of the mandated islands in the South Pacific.

In such circumstances the determination of our Far Eastern policy becomes of even greater importance than is at first realized. It must take into consideration not only the status of Manchuria but also the effect upon our interests in the whole Pacific area of a change in the position of Japan which can not be ignored under cover of nonrecognition of the fruits of Japanese aggression. In 1922 the United States thought it had attained the goal toward which its Far Eastern policy had been directed for almost a century in the formal international recognition of China's territorial integrity and the Open Door. The breakdown of this agreement rather than the injuries sustained by the world's peace machinery should consequently be our major concern today, whatever the developments at Geneva. If we are to stand by the Stimson doctrine, it must be with a realisation that it does not in the slightest degree represent a solution of the problem we are facing but is nothing more than a point of departure.

Congressional choler is rising over the calm continuation of debt negotiations. If the lame ducks had another leg to stand on there would be some kicking.

If only 12 per cent of the farmers are in any danger of losing their property and three-fourths of these have mortgage contracts that would require payment in the present gold dollar, some way must be found to help the small remainder instead of debasing all the currency.

What lame duck shall be chosen to represent the disappearing breed in Statuary Hall? The limpest?

France has a cabinet crisis, too, but isn't limited in the choice of a premier to a Hitler or the head of the National Socialists.

The most astounding news from the Senate is that Senator McKellar has only four amendments ready to spring on the Treasury-Postoffice bill. But the discussion is still young.

PARENT THOUGHT.

Some day some lover bold will come
Unheralded by horn or drum
And take my little girl away
In spite of all that I may say.

Nor troops in arms, severe, erect,
'Gainst him my castle can protect
Nor judge, nor lawyers, nor police
Force him his love design to cease.

I call her mine and yet I know
Some day with him she'll choose to go
And wish to share with him the care
Which we have known and had to bear.

I only hope when he appears
That I can trust him down the years
And till the day he comes to die
He, too, will cherish her, as I.

Goatskin Bottles That Were Old Couldn't Hold the Wine That Was New

By ROBERT QUILLEN

If you are an average, "upper middle class" American—that is, one not born with a silver spoon in his mouth and yet the kind of person who might be reading this—it is quite probable that you are missing the forest because of the trees.

When you were younger and lived in the dream world of historical novels you said to yourself: "Aw, gee! Everything interesting has already happened."

And now, despite your increased wisdom, you think of history as you think of the creation of the world—not as something in process of being completed, but as an accomplished fact.

That isn't correct. History is still in the making and you are living it.

When the makers of America were sharpening their tools a great liberal wrote, "These are the times that try men's souls."

His words were true, and yet the times to which he referred were a teapot tempest compared to these. The world's stage was smaller, history moved at a leisurely pace, battles were fought and lost without disturbing peaceful citizens 50 miles away.

Today you have a part in affairs that may prove the most eventful in history. Whatever the outcome may be, this much is certain: Old ways, old standards and old systems no longer can survive without other support than custom, and when the turmoil and confusion are ended and the minds of men are again at peace we shall find ourselves in a new world.

These are the times that try men's souls. It is now that we stand at Armageddon. For those who have eyes to see, this is the test of civilization—the fork of the road—the trial of America's fitness to survive.

Our breed has survived other trials when the faint-hearted surrendered to despair. Our heritage is the blood of men who held on grimly when hope itself was gone and eventually fought their way out.

There is a way out now. But we shall find it only by realizing the fact that old ways no longer serve, by cutting loose from all hampering precedent, and by uniting our forces unselfishly to clear the ground for a new era.

You can't solve the transportation problems of an airplane age by using ox carts and saddle bags.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Exeunt Lame Ducks.

Kansas City Times.

Lame ducks in the House who applauded ratification of the amendment that will forever make impossible short sessions such as that now in progress may or may not have been wholly magnanimous. These lame ducks have one deep consolation. The amendment does not apply to them personally. And when, as members of the House at the last session, they perchance aided submission of the amendment resolution, they, perhaps, had little thought that they would be lame ducks before the year was out. But, speculation aside, the deed is done. The House members could not have refused, with a good face, to join in the general acclaim of the act. It is now unanimous.

Consolidation.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

No more interesting news has emanated from Mr. Roosevelt's winter quarters than his reported plan for unifying Federal regulation of all forms of transportation and communication as a part of his general reorganization of the Government. Under one agency would be grouped the railroads, motorbuses and trucks, aviation activities, inland waterways and shipping and pipe lines. The other would have jurisdiction over telephones, telegraphs, radio and power.

The details are still to be worked out, but the proper extension of Federal regulation of transportation and its unification hold promise of great benefit to the country at large.

Roosevelt Family Harmony.

Brooklyn Eagle.

When Kermit Roosevelt accepts an invitation to be the guest of Franklin D. Roosevelt on a ten-day yachting trip on Vincent Astor's Nourmahal, it may be fair to assume that a degree of harmony between the Republican Roosevelt clan and the Democratic Roosevelt clan has been established. This is a matter of legitimate public interest. The observer may paraphrase Scripture: "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for cousins to dwell together in unity."

An Unwarranted Expense.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Speaker Garner's district, the Texas Fifteenth, is one of the largest congressional districts in the country. It contains no less than 23 counties. Across it, east to west, from Corpus Christi to Eagle Pass, is some 200 miles. From Uvalde County, in the northernmost corner, to Brownsville, at the southern tip, is 300 miles. Now, thanks to Speaker Garner's extreme caution, the $70,000 people in his district are to be put to the expense of three special elections. Elected Vice President and reelected representative on the same ballot last fall, he must now resign his seat in the House and a successor must be chosen. The first Democratic primary will be held next month, the run-off in March and the election in April. With a Democratic landslide a certainty last November, there is no good reason why Speaker Garner should not have stepped aside then and permitted the election of his successor, without additional cost to Texas.

Shoes Distributed to the Needy Worthy Charity That Deser Public Support.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington, at this time of depr gion and want, there exists a philan thropic agency that should make di rect appeal to all. Reference is mad to "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," 727 Seventeenth street north west, where those who need shoes are given them, repaired and in wearable condition. One can not say what amount of sickness and even life ha been saved through this agency. Th physician will testify that warm an dry feet are necessary to health. Colds and pneumonia often are greater where such conditions do not exist.

Since December 20, 7,000 pairs shoes have been distributed. Th are 600 to 700 applicants daily. Fr a studio window can be seen e morning from 200 to 300 of the ne ing waiting patiently, often in cold and rain. There are men, wom and little children, who are carried their mothers' arms. The demand for shoes far exceeds the supply. Often there is bitter disappointment. Let Washington take this movement to heart. It costs nothing—only the gathering together of discarded shoes.

The Carroll Laundry Co., Atlantic 3700, has offered to call and deliver gratis. The Hahn Shoe Co. repairs all shoes without expense. The movement was originated by Mr. A. Regis Noel, Washington attorney, and is sponsored by a group of Washingtonians. It would be a kind act, with little sacrifice, to assist this cause.

Supply and Demand Will Regulate Value of Silver in Spite of What Congress Might Attempt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is reported that the senior senator from Idaho is anxious to get the United States back to bimetalism, by an act of Congress, making the parity 16 to 1, as Mr. Bryan wanted it in 1896. A recent quotation of the price of silver shows that is now 80 to 1. Does he imagine that Congress could multiply the value of silver five times, even if it were unanimous? From the beginning there was a double standard, but the prices would not stay put, and up to 1873 Congress made fourteen attempts to stabilize the two metals, the last attempt putting it at 15 to 1. But in 1873 it dropped to 17 to 1 and the silver dollar was demonetized. (Perhaps the senator was too young to have noticed it.)

Since that time we have been on a gold standard, and the greenback, now unhampered, went to par 60 days before it was expected, under the skillful handling of the Treasury by Secretary John Sherman.

Since that time our currency has been good for its face on any counter in the world. Supply and demand is a team that always holds the trumps, and the needs of men and the ability to meet them will fix prices in the future just as it always has, with the metals as well as with farm products.

Correspondent Hints That Technocracy Is All Right Because It Isn't New.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To an impartial onlooker the most amusing side issue of technocracy is the manner in which its opponents are treating it. Nothing seems to give them more satisfaction than to dig up previous ideas that to a greater or lesser extent are similar to those involved in technocracy.

But what of it. Can these critics tell us of any popular theory, plan, invention or discovery that was not anticipated by some one other than its reputed originator? There is nothing new under the sun. Some of us have always known this, but the opponents of technocracy are apparently just discovering it.

Ulster Will Not Accept Union Under De Valera, Says Correspondent.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial relative to the De Valera victory is unduly solicitous about the future of Ulster. Ulster is safe and sane and satisfied. She will have none of the De Valera medicine. Ulster certainly does not want a leader who is so supple of conscience that he will take a solemn obligation in the form of an oath and then admit he took it with mental reservations.

Ulster wants liberty under law. The De Valera followers want liberty for themselves only. Witness the hoodlum methods applied to Cosgrave in the County Kerry, which is a De Valera stronghold. There can be no political marriage between the political ideals of Kerry, Connemara and Ulster. No; there can be no union between such incompatible political elements. I am quite sure if Leinster, the most intelligent and prosperous province in Ireland, had its way, she would prefer to be under the rule of the British Parliament rather than the Dublin Parliament dominated by such destructive forces as the De Valera fanatics.

Suggests Planting of Dogwoods in District—Virginia Getting Busy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by a news item in The Post January 25 that the Virginia Garden Club is asking girl and boy scouts to scatter dogwood seed on their hikes throughout the State. Would it not be a fine idea to do this in the District? A display of dogwoods in our parks, front yards and street triangles would make a very attractive addition to the scenic features of Washington. It is proposed to have 1,000,000 dogwood trees planted in Virginia by 1935. Why not a hundred thousand or so in the District of Columbia?

NATURE FAN.

KING OF THE JUNGLE

by CHARLES THURLEY STONEHAM

SYNOPSIS.

Resident Commissioner Loudon Grant receives a letter from his deputy, Martin Sefton, reporting the demand for aid by the natives against the ravages of lions who, according to the natives, were led by a lion god in the shape of a man. Horton, a Canadian newspaper publisher, who happens to be around, is intrigued with the story and offers 500 pounds to any one who will bring the lion man to him alive. A veteran hunter by the name of Cloete sets out on the venture.

CHAPTER IX.

THE evening wind died out over the veld. As the sky turned to a deeper blue and one star began to mirror its brightness in a placid pool by the bank, lights sprang up in a little camp amongst the acacia trees.

Jan Cloete had pitched his own small tent 100 yards from the bivouacs of his boys. These were of the Wahehe tribe, strangers to the district, but not to the animals that inhabited it. There were a dozen of them, stalwart, reserved fellows, game to tackle any dangerous job if they were well enough paid for it.

The hunters had been in camp by the river for two days, and Kaspa was aware of their presence, although they were, as yet, unaware of his. Cloete had explored every ravine and game trail within a mile without finding a trace of the tracks he sought. Despite the information of the Bomogo, he was beginning to think that the story of the lion-man was a myth and that the 100 pounds which Horton had paid him in advance was all that he would get out of the venture, but as he sat that evening before his tent door chewing his pipe and speculating upon his next proceeding, the quarry he sought was within a short distance of him and about to announce his presence in unmistakable form.

A deep, melancholy sound arose on the night air from upstream direction. "Ooo-argh! Oo-argh! Ooargh-ah-ah-argh!"

Jan Cloete put down his pipe and bent forward, listening intently. The chatter about the cooking fires ceased suddenly. Again sounded that weird, terrible music, vibrant with all the aching savagery of the wilderness, the yearning of vast solitudes beneath the companionless stars.

This time the call had barely ceased before it was taken up and repeated in a burst of clamorous, frightening voices.

The Dutchman expelled his breath in a long gasp.

"Simba!" he called in a low voice. A tall, powerfully built native detached himself from the group by the fire and hastened forward. "You hear those lions up the stream; what do you make of them?"

"Two lions and two lionesses, Bwana," the man answered.

"And what else?" Cloete's gaze was on him in restrained eagerness. Simba was silent.

"You who are named like the lion, tell me what was that first beast that roared?" asked the Dutchman. "What lion speaks with that voice?"

The native answered: "It may be a small lion, Bwana, but no lion that I ever heard spoke like that one."

Cloete picked up his pipe and lit it with satisfaction.

"Ah! So like, and yet not quite like," he said. "An almost perfect imitation of a lion, one might say. But, man"—and his voice rose wonderfully—"what sort of a chest is it that can produce those notes?"

The native moistened his lips nervously. "If it is a man he is not like other men," he said almost fearfully.

Cloete roared at him. "Don't you start getting scared now! Man or devil, he's worth money to us and we're going to get him. Hurry up that grub, now. If they kill tonight I want to find where, and the sooner I start following them up the better."

Simba returned to the cook fire, where the conversation broke out again in low tones and away up on to the veld went the echoing music of the lions, sighing in melancholy cadences through the river trees, causing tiny shivers to run up and down the spines of the men who listened.

Kaspa and his pack went off to hunt zebra. The rains had broken three weeks before and game was more plentiful now. On this night they scouted up past the white man's camp onto the open veld, where a zebra herd might be expected to be found feeding on the young grass in the starlight. They paid little attention to the scents of man and smoke wafted to them an the faint breeze, for immunity had given them a contempt for man, and they feared him not.

Kaspa had investigated one afternoon, and had observed Cloete with some astonishment. He put him down to be a different type of the same human family with the appearance of which he was familiar. After all, there were different kinds of wildebeeste and zebra, why not man?

He had ceased to be interested in man, whom he had long since discovered to be a cowardly, foolish brute, much like the baboon. Their ways and his were as far apart as the poles, and he had no wish that they should be any nearer. So he went about his hunting without regard to the camp by the river and the curious animal it contained. They winded a zebra herd before long, and Kaspa and his brothers set out to stampede them in the usual manner, whilst the lionesses lay up in a patch of tangled bush waiting for the moment to launch their attack.

The maneuver was successful. A fat young stallion was struck down and conveyed into the shadow of a grove of trees, and there the pack fed.

Jan Cloete, while eating his evening meal, had followed the progress of the hunt with understanding ear. The grunting and short roarings told him of the slow driving of the zebra herd, the outburst of violent sound described the sudden attack to fluster the quarry and stampede it to the waiting lionesses, and the long triumphant "kill" roar proved the death. He finished his dinner about the time the lions were starting theirs, and, calling Simba to follow, shouldered his rifle and took the trail.

They made a long detour to get downwind, and, having agreed upon the approximate position of the kill, advanced upon it with the utmost caution. It is extremely difficult to find a lion's dinner-party in a stretch of wild country. The voice of the lion, even when not deliberately thrown afar, is confusing to human ears, and there are so many places where a kill may be concealed that it is more than likely that the searcher will blunder upon it when he least expects it. Cloete was well aware of this, and, since his purpose was to view the lions without scaring them, he took every precaution to avoid discovery. In this he was assisted by the numerous hyenas hastening upwind to the kill. The scavengers gave him a wide berth and hurried on, but he was enabled to follow their tracks in the bright starlight, and before long their chucklings and growlings told him that he was close to the spot where the lions fed, watched by their jealous satellites.

It was now necessary to approach unobserved by the beasts who had so far acted as his guides. There were about a score of hyenas assembled in the bushes nearby, and all of them were gifted with senses of the utmost acuteness.

He could not hope to remain undiscovered by them, but since they were well acquainted with man, and not disposed to be chased away from meat by his presence, he hoped to insinuate himself into their midst without causing them to announce his intrusion to the lions. In this he was partially successful. Accompanied by Simba, he stole forward a foot at a time until within a few yards of the kill.

The hyenas became aware of him and removed themselves from his vicinity, but without any violent expressions of alarm, so that he was confident that the lions did not hear their low-voiced comments upon his arrival at the feast.

In this he was mistaken. Both Kaspa and his friends knew immediately that a man was near, not only from the actions of the hyenas, but from their own acute sense of hearing, which discovered the whereabouts of some clumsy twig-cracking creature near by and identified him the instant a wandering puff of wind made the circle of the little clearing in which they stood. But Kaspa had no fear of men when darkness enshrouded him. Long immunity had made him contemptuous of this enemy, who he was convinced was only to be dreaded in large numbers and in broad daylight.

If some curious man had stolen up on them to pry and observe, he could join the hyenas as an audience for the feast of the kings of the wilderness and, like the hyenas, he would be welcome to the leavings. As long as he made no effort to interfere Kaspa was careless of his presence.

Cloete did not know in what contempt he was held. He was reluctant to advance farther for fear of disturbing the lions. It was as well for him that this reluctance existed, for had he approached the kill he would have been attacked by the whole pack.

From the bush beneath which he crouched he could see the dim shape of the dead zebra twenty paces distant, and huge, shadowy forms moving about it. The sounds of eating and the low purrings and growlings which made the conversation of the lions were distinctly audible to him, but no clear view of any one of the animals could be obtained.

He lay there for an hour, at the end of which he had caught a glimpse of a vague upright form and heard a chuckle that he was convinced had not emanated from a hyena; then, as the chilly dawn breeze came soughing up over the veld and the stars paled, the lions went away, roaring and talking, up toward the forest. When they had entirely departed Cloete went forward to the kill and chased the hyenas from it.

He was cold and weary, having spent most of the night crawling upon hands and knees and lying prone behind bushes, but he was pleased with his discoveries, for he was now convinced that the Bomogo had not lied, and that there was some strange manlike creature abroad upon the veld whose capture meant 500 pounds in his pocket. He and Simba sat down by the remains of the zebra and waited patiently for dawn. When it was light enough they commenced their investigations. The kill was reduced to a pile of bones and a few chunks of coarse meat, by which the hunter knew that the lions had been hungry and had fed full. "They will sleep sound enough today," he muttered.

Simba was searching for spoor. He pointed out the tracks of broad, human feet, and Cloete whistled. "If his feet are like those of a man, he be a man all over," he said.

Up to now he had scouted the idea that the lion-god might be a human being, inclining to the theory that if such a creature existed it must be a hybrid ape. He was now wondering just what sort of thing he would have to deal with when he set out to capture it. The tracks led up over the grassy veld, where they became faint and indistinguishable to any but a tracker of Simba's skill. He followed them without difficulty until at the end of a mile, they dipped into a big donga and led plainly across its dusty surface to the opening of a cave in the further bank. Cloete and his henchman turned back to camp and breakfast.

As Cloete had predicted, Kaspa and his friends slept soundly that day. They did not hear the sound of a distant shot nor see a group of natives dragging the carcass of a zebra across the veld near their cave, but when darkness fell and they started out for the nightly hunt they struck the scent of that meat, and, directed by curiosity and the anticipation of an easy meal, followed the broad trail. It led to the same grove of trees in which they had eaten the zebra of the previous night. Cloete's preparations for them had been simple. A large net of strong rope was suspended upon four slender posts over the kill. Attached to the posts was a cord, at the other end of which was Simba, concealed in a tree.

Kaspa became aware of Simba as soon as he circled this gratuitous meal, but he merely assumed that the man who had visited the feast the night before had returned again. He could see nothing wrong with the tiny clearing or the kill in the center of it. The stretched net seemed to him a tangle of interlacing creepers, and although he wondered that he had not noticed it the previous night, its presence was not alarming. He stepped forward with his long loping stride, uttering a low rallying cry to his pack. As he passed under the net, it collapsed upon him.

New York Reception To Honor Claudel And Wife.

THE AMBASSADOR OF FRANCE AND MME. CLAUDEL, who are in New York, will attend the International 1933 Art Exhibition at Rockefeller Center on Tuesday, February 7, when a reception will be given in their honor.

The Ambassador of Germany, Herr Friederich von Prittwits und Gaffron, will view the International 1933 Art Exhibition at Rockefeller Center in New York on February 11.

The ambassador is one of the patrons for the benefit performance of "Parsifal" to be given at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York on Monday, February 13, under auspices of the Southern Women's Educational Alliance.

The opera will serve two purposes, that of raising funds for the work of the alliance in providing educational and vocational guidance for young people in rural districts, and that of being the New York celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the death of Richard Wagner. The date will be commemorated by music lovers throughout the world, particularly in Germany, where Frau Winifred Wagner is in charge of the celebration.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend Will Give Luncheon.

The Ambassador of Germany and Frau von Prittwitz und Gaffron, the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso and the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik will be ranking guests at the luncheon which Mrs. Lawrence Townsend will give on Wednesday following the last of her morning musicales of this season at the Mayflower. The guests of honor at the luncheon will be the artists of the day, Mme. Lotte Lehmann, German opera and lieder singer, and Signor Paolo Marion, tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera.

Neither of these artists has sung before in Washington and their Capital debut is looked forward to with much interest. Signor Marion arrived in New York only a few days ago from Europe. No less person than Richard Strauss was the determining factor in the career of Signor Marion, for it was Strauss who urged him to take up singing, and later to study with him.

Though born an Austrian, Signor Marion is of Italian descent, and his voice is typically Italian. He has made operatic appearances in Milan, Rome and Turin and made his American debut in Chicago November 3, 1931.

Mme. Lehmann is of the Chicago Opera Company, and made her debut in this country with that opera in 1930. She enjoys the distinction of honorary membership with the Vienna Stratsoper, and is, in addition, guest artist of the leading opera houses of Germany, a member of the Covent Garden Opera, of London.

Mrs. Townsend's concerts, which for several years have been known as the outstanding musical events of Washington, charmingly combined with a social atmosphere, will be resumed next winter.

The Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Debuchi will leave today for New York and return to Washington on Thursday. While in New York the Ambassador will deliver an address at the luncheon meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York Thursday.

The Egyptian Minister, Sesostris Sidarouss Pasha, was the guest in whose honor Mr. Jac Downs entertained at the Shoreham dinner dance Saturday. Covers were laid for eight.

Senator-elect Bennett C. Clark, of Missouri, and Mrs. Clark arrived in Washington Saturday and are staying at the Mayflower. Mr. Clark will take the oath of office on Friday, having been appointed by the Governor of Missouri to succeed Senator Harry B. Hawes for the balance of his term expiring on March 3. Ordinarily, Mr. Clark would not have been sworn into office until March 4.

Mrs. Clark is the former Miss Miriam Marsh, of Waterloo, Iowa. Their three young sons, Champ, Marsh and Kimball, are remaining in St. Louis for the present.

Mrs. Charles Baird, Jr., To Entertain at Tea.

Mrs. Charles Baird, jr., will entertain at a small tea on February 8.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

SINCE the majority of physicians agree that the combination of diet and exercise makes a sensible and gradual reducing course, the importance of knowing foods is obvious. Know the calory value of the various foods you eat each day. When you do it is an easy matter to regulate your diet. Eliminate to some extent the fat-producing elements. Know for instance that a single piece of bread contains 100 calories, an average size potato 100, a pattet butter 90, a lump of sugar 25, and so on.

I know a number of women who reduced very satisfactorily by cutting out bread for an entire week. The next week bread appeared in their diet, but potatoes were definitely absent. Then for a week sugar was dispensed with, &c.

Calorie Chart.

I have a complete calorie chart which is too lengthy to reprint here. A self-addressed, stamped envelope will bring you the information as to the number of calories in common foods. Study it and you will see that it takes a very small quantity of fatty foods to equal 1,000 calories, whereas that many calories of salads and vegetables are an overabundance.

This calorie chart will also tell you approximately how many calories you need a day, depending upon your type of work. Knowing your foods and your needs, you will be able to balance both. Remember that fat is caused when you eat in excess of what you need and do not exercise that excess away. When you are hungry it is not necessarily because you need food, but the signal of the stomach contracting. Eat just what you must have to appease this signal, then call on your warehouse or storage to get some more and use that up. Then you will get thin.

Do not overeat. Do not eat between meals. Better to drink water. Do not oversleep, for that is often a cause of superfluous flesh. And do fight off laziness. Keep active. Exercise. As a child you realized how necessary it was to have bodily activity to keep well. It is equally important as we get older. Remember that alcoholic drinks have high caloric value. Avoid them. Also avoid bedtime snacks. If you feel a gnawing deep down there, drink some fruit juice.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

THAT TIRED FEELING.

IT is said that marathon racers show a need for sugar water and salt at the end of their grueling contests. When physiological tests were made during some of the contests a few years ago there was some surprise that nothing of importance was revealed. The heart was not found to be particularly enlarged or dilated and no evidence of strain was noted in the lungs. There was some evidence of albuminaria, but it was transitory and no Bright's disease was noted as a sequence.

In more recent contests the method used has tended to be more along chemical lines. One of the results of these tests has been evidence that during an endurance run of more than 20 miles and lasting more than an hour the contestants' blood sugar is burned almost to exhaustion. The muscle and liver cells feed sugar into the blood stream to supply the shortage, but, do the best they can, the deficiency is not met and blood sugar runs far below the normal level. In consequence, the runner feels weak, suffers from exhaustion and may go into collapse. He keeps on his way because of his will to win and in spite of an urge to quit on the part of all his organs lower in the scale than the brain.

Sugar in the blood is necessary for life, and absence of blood sugar is an invariably fatal disease, if the term can be so used. This statement, without further elaboration, will cause some to think there is no sugar hunger except among those who are very uncomfortable and in great danger.

On the other hand, a large number of persons suffer minor discomforts as a result of temporary low blood sugar. A man gets up in the morning with an "all gone" feeling. He is good for nothing until he has his morning coffee. We will assume that he is not a steady drinker and that his yearn is not for the drink of liquor that his body cells crave. The probability is that the man has used up considerable of his sugar during the night and his blood sugar is very low. He drinks a cup of coffee and feels fit. The warm drink has helped and the coffee has contributed its part, but far from being useless is the sugar used in the coffee. The man might have felt just about as happy had he dissolved some sugar in warm water and substituted that for coffee.

A woman goes shopping. Toward the fag end of the tour she feels faint and "gone." She may stop and have a cup of tea and chocolate. It might not be so pleasing but she would brace up pretty well if she ate a little candy or a few lumps of sugar, or drank some sweetened, flavored, warm water to which no coffee or tea had been added. Sugar is an excellent bracer.

Marathon racers sometimes fortify themselves by drinking some sirup or eating some sugar before the contest. During a marathon the contestant loses an excessive amount of water and more salt than he can spare. This adds to the discomforts and may cause him to have cramps.

What Today Means to You

"AQUARIUS."

IF January 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 11:30 a. m., from 5 p. m. to 5:50 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 a. m. to 9:55 a. m and from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m.

It may be necessary for you to make some kind of a readjustment in either your business or your family affairs. It may not appear at the time to be a desirable change, but approached with the right attitude the final results will in all probability be to your advantage. Visits made on this day to the old and the sick will be productive of much happiness.

The child born on this January 30 will in all probability be fortunate all through life in having as friends people of influence. This child is cut out to lead and direct. At school he will lead his teams to victory or will preside over his classmates at meetings. The child must guard against becoming opinionated.

Born on January 30, you have very high ideals for your own conduct and for the conduct of others. There is more than a little of the reformer about you; at times you feel very strongly that you should set out on a crusade of some sort to aid mankind. You are the type of person who more likely than not is found on the membership of the Antisaloon League or other similar associations. If you are more radical in your views you may be found along with others advancing your claim in a more militant fashion. There is nothing weak about you; when it becomes a question what you think is right, you will carry on in the face of the most tremendous odds. You are an able speaker. You have a mind that sees issues quickly, that can marshal arguments into a formidable attack, and can then drive these thoughts home forcibly to your listeners.

If your birthday is on January 30, you are rather a different person at home than at your work. At home, you are mild mannered and quiet; you have little to say or to suggest. You enjoy your wife or husband as the case may be, and your children. You like to read and meditate. At any rate, you crave quiet and harmony in the home, and you do see that you get that. Music brings you much joy.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

It's a jacket and a chic wrap-around skirt—oddly buttoned over, the jacket thrice, the skirt once. And a light and dark contrast in the material proves not too startling for elegance. (A Dah-ray Design.)

BEFORE a woman can be stylish, or chic,' or elegant, she must be poised. And with poise comes that intangible something which the French, as we, call chic. The woman with poise is she of whom 'tis said, "Oh, she can wear anything, positively anything, and look well in it!" That is true because she looks well herself!

When Mona Paiva, the celebrated French dancer, conceived the not entirely original idea of dancing for charity in a cage of lions, she proved herself not only a woman of daring and courage, but of poise. The courage of the tamer of those lions is indisputable, but his courage is ever on the watch, alert, tense, strained. She had to have poise as well and be so sure of her power to charm the lions that she could execute her dance without tenseness—with poise.

And I can promise you without ever having seen her, that she is chic in her street attire. Her poise assures me of this!

Poise only comes with assurance. Royalty has it from infancy, and the children of wise parents have it. The rest of us must practice it, acquire it. Childhood don'ts and the deadly "little children should be seen and not heard" are mainly responsible for the lack of poise in an adult—any happening after adolescence which could permanently rob a person of poise already acquired in childhood by that person would have to be in the nature almost of a psychical accident.

And poise and charm are indissoluble. The audacious, assured and chic little midinette—or her Broadway sister, have poise of a kind, and are undeniably charming—when not irritating. The "grand dame" has poise of a different kind, and a more enduring and subtle charm, even though she, too, can be maddening—to anyone subconsciously envious. But show me either of these women—and I will see a girl or woman who is modish and chic, the grand dame probably a true elegante. For poise and stylishness are inseperable.

No woman without poise—and poise, by the way, is like the circle—it can't be a "not so" or "very" round circle—and poise can not be qualified. Well, as I started to say, no woman without poise could wear the gown I designed for you today—but how a woman with poise could wear it! It is really a one piece dress, very smartly cut, and showing an unusual wrap-around skirt treatment. But as you see it, with its oddly closed and sleeved jacket, it looks like a tailleur, doesn't it? The jacket dares one sleeve in contrast to the other—always difficult to wear, always startling, and not always chic. But nothing as obvious as black and white, which I find entirely too startling a contrast for a two-sleeve idea, is employed. Instead, two shades of the same color—which you've guessed is taupe and lighter grey.

* * * *

Oriental designs, ten of 'em! All yours for sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post. And not Chinese, either, but more Oriental than that. Little and big, all traceable and enlargeable. Never can tell when you'll need one most awf'lly—can't always run one to earth when you want one, you know. So send the envelope while you think of it.

* * * *

If she rides, she wears jewelry made of bone or horn, or horsehair. The bracelet is of horsehair, finely contrasted and beautifully woven, and the ring is inlaid horn matching the bracelet in colors only. Then her riding shirts are monogrammed with her first name in the shape of a horse's head—and altogether, it's a fine sport and the accessories are only a part of the fun!

Au revoir.

Culbertson on Bridge

By ELY CULBERTSON

WHERE SYSTEMS ARE PASSE.

MESSRS. D. A. McDONALD and O. P. Watson are two of the leading Bridge players of Toronto, Canada. Recently they made a trip to London, Ontario, to play in a Bridge tournament conducted by the Tecumseh Bridge Club. Playing against two youngsters in the Open Pair Contest, they were quite surprised at the meticulous accuracy with which their opponents arrived at the only correct contract on a hand. After it was played out and bottom score duly recorded against the seasoned campaigners, Mr. Watson inquired of one youth, "What system of bidding do you use?"

"Oh," was the reply, "we're playing a system we made up ourselves."

Passing on to the next table, another pair of strangers was encountered, and Mr. Watson was taking no chances. With his most interrogative inflection he remarked, "We're playing the Culbertson System."

"Thanks," was the reply; "we're from Forest and we play the wide open game."

The hands were then extracted from the board, the exponents of the "wide open" system occupying the North and South seats.

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ J 9 8 7 5 2 ♡ — ◇ K 4 ♣ 10 8 6 5 4
♠ K ♡ A K Q 10 ◇ A Q J 10 ♣ A K J 7	N W E S	♠ — ♡ J 9 8 6 ◇ 5 3 ♣ Q 9 3 2
	♠ A Q 10 6 4 3 ♡ 7 4 2 ◇ 9 8 6 2 ♣ —

The Forest gentleman in the South at once proceeded to demonstrate the "wide open" game with a courageous bid of four spades. This attack, however, failed to make even a dent in the armor of Mr. Watson, in the West. Fortified with a thorough knowledge of the latest conventions, a dependable partner and a galaxy of honor-tricks, he countered with four no-trump, an irreproachable declaration, of which even I might be proud. North, however, was not to be bluffed. Counting 5 playing-tricks in support of his partner's bid, he retorted with six spades, wisely withholding the full Raise for fear of duplication of values. Neither East nor South felt called upon to take any further part in the proceedings; West doubled, all passed, and the rest can be left to the imagination of my readers.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

South—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ K J 8 7 ♡ 8 7 4 ◇ K 6 ♣ A J 9 3
♠ 9 6 4 ♡ Q J 5 3 ◇ 8 7 3 ♣ 6 5 2	N W E S	♠ Q 10 2 ♡ 9 2 ◇ 10 4 ♣ K Q 10 8 7 4
	♠ A 5 3 ♡ A K 10 6 ◇ A Q J 9 5 2 ♣ —

Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

FEWER LOANS MADE ON LIFE INSURANCE

President Smith, New England, Sees Signs of Better Business.

Boston, Jan. 29.—A steady decrease since June in demands for policy loans, with November borrowings the lowest of any month in the last two and a half years, is revealed in the eighty-ninth annual report of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co., just made public.

"As this is also the experience of many other companies," President George Willard Smith says, "it would seem to indicate an improvement in general conditions."

Pointing out that requests for policy loans in the last three years have been more than double the normal, due to the business depression, the report states that within the last year New England Mutual policyholders have repaid more than $2,000,000, a larger sum than in any previous year. In the same period policyholders established a new high record by leaving over $842,000 of dividends with the company on deposit, besides $1,000,000 in dividends applied to buy additional paid-up insurance.

Dividend Voted in 1933.

Gross surplus before dividend allotments for the year 1933 was $30,673,420. Net surplus after the deduction of dividends voted was $16,323,420, which, with $3,000,000 set aside as an investment fluctuation fund, exceeded the total of a year ago.

The report pointed out that since 1899 the annual dividend to each policyholder has been higher than that paid him the year before and that, despite general economic conditions, $11,350,000 has been voted for dividend distribution in 1933, continuing their regular scale without reduction.

Payments to policyholders and beneficiaries, exclusive of dividends, totaled $28,158,768, nearly $6,000,000 more than in 1931, but, notwithstanding terminations of policies, the amount of insurance in force was only 2.14 per cent less than at the beginning of the year.

Total premium income was larger than in any previous year, due in part to the company's entry into the annuity field last year, but, excluding annuity premiums, premium income was only 2 per cent less than in 1931.

Explaining how mutual life insurance companies have weathered the financial storm of the last three years, President Smith says:

"Every process in the fundamental operation of life insurance rests on facts, scientifically applied to the particular subject involved. The mortality table, the interest table, the premium table—these depend in no sense on the fluctuations of the stock market or the hazards of industry.

"From the psychological point of view it is a recognized fact that life insurance equities, having proved a ready asset in time of dire necessity, have served the country as a substantial aid in the maintenance of public and financial morale. The most outstanding feature of life insurance performance during the last three years has been its immediate response to requests for money through policy loans. Policyholders have turned to their life insurance equities with great reluctance as other sources of aid were exhausted. That the companies have been able to meet this unprecedented demand is a striking commentary on their financial strength.

Three Factors Contribute.

"Three factors, not available as a whole to business generally or to the individual investor, contribute to the soundness of the life insurance structure. First, uninterrupted cash income from new and renewal premiums and from interest on investments; second, diversification of investments, carefully regulated by statute, and third, a continuous trusteeship of funds invested in sound income-producing securities which can be held for maturity values.

"In the regulation of life insurance companies by the various States these fundamentals are understood, and consideration is given to the fact that the fluctuations of the daily market, and even the downward trend in prices, in a depression have little bearing on the permanent investment holdings of a life insurance company."

SOCIETY

under direction of R. E. Rapp, will present a concert of specially selected sacred music.

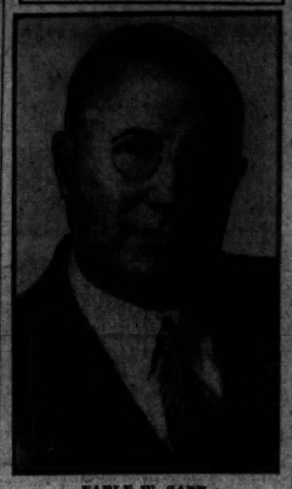
A thousand persons have already attended the exhibit of paintings by the late Mrs. Alice Pike Barney, which has been held at her house, 2306 Massachusetts avenue, over the week-end. More than 500 were present yesterday and among them many prominent persons in society, artists and art lovers.

By general request, Mme. Dreyfus-Barney has consented to extend the exhibit two more days so that the house will be open today and tomorrow from 3 p. m. to 6 p. m. The pictures are to be sent to various art galleries in the course of time. Among the paintings attracting special attention was a study of Queen Elizabeth, which has been selected by the Folger Library for its building here. Other pictures are those to be hung in the Corcoran Gallery of Art and others to be sent to the National Gallery of Art.

Besides the members of the Arts Club, the Pen Women's League and other local societies, those attending were Miss Juliet Thompson, who assisted Mme. Dreyfus in receiving; Mr. and Mrs. Slade, the Misses Patten, Miss Anne Squires, Mrs. William Remey, Miss Angelica Remey, Baroness Coraff, Mrs. Corbin, Mrs. Jennings Hackett, Mrs. Cassels, Mrs. Dee Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mrs. Washington, Mrs. G. F. Downey, Mrs. Berry, Mrs. Mary Stewart, Mrs. Gideon Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. Allen McDonald, Mrs. William Wheatley, Miss Margaret O'Brien, the Misses Muhlhofer, Miss A. Sheridan, Mrs. Mortimer Clarke, Mrs. Thomas Lockwood, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, Mrs. Speel, the Ambassador of Czechoslovakia, Mrs. Albert Clemons, Mr. Henry May, Mr. Charles M. Remey and Col. Halstead.

Others who have attended the exhibition are Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Miss Laura Harlan, M. and Mme. Rionda, of New York; Mrs. Charles Deming, Signorita Lozano, Miss Isabel Wells, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Robert Hinckley, Miss Helen Clark, Mrs. George Oakley Totten, Mrs. O. H. P. Johnson, Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mr. Wilbur Underwood, Admiral Straus, Mr. Coleman Jennings and many others.

GENERAL AGENT



EARLE W. SAPP,

SEAL COMPRESSOR SAFETY GUARANTEE

Washington Inventor Patents Device to Safeguard Refrigerators.

No longer need users of household iceboxes fear danger from the leakage of dangerous or obnoxious gases from their refrigerators.

Maurice E. Joyce, well-known Washington inventor, has been notified by the Patent Office that a device upon which he has been working for several years to prevent the escape of gases in the manufacture of ice in domestic refrigerators, has been allowed. The device is described as a seal for a compressor shaft. It is on the inside of the crank case, runs in an oil bath and is therefore self-lubricating. Heretofore, it has been found that even where a specially prepared metal has been used friction caused a wearing away of the composition sufficient to enable the escape of the necessary gases used in making ice.

In some instances these gases such as sulphur dioxide while nonpoisonous, noninflammable and nonexplosive have an objectionable odor. Methyl chloride is inflammable, as is ethyl chloride, although the latter is odorless. Carbon monoxide, as most people know, is highly poisonous. There is no possibility of escape of any of these gases by the use of the appliance patented by Mr. Joyce. Microscopic tests have been made which demonstrate that after more than six months of constant operation there has been no wear on the crank shaft because of the use of the seal compressor. Similar tests have shown it capable of containing the newly developed and powerful gas known as F-12.

Mr. Joyce is the son of the late Maurice Joyce, founder of the Maurice Joyce Engraving Co. and also a distinguished inventor. The elder Joyce worked with Thomas A. Edison and Emil Berliner in the development of the modern talking machine.

After Edison had made his first records for the reproduction of sound, he found their practical use handicapped by inability to duplicate a record, once the wax cylinders had been perforated with the little indentions that the needle followed in reproducing the sound. If, for example, a hundred records of a song were desired, it was necessary to make each one separately. Mr. Joyce invented for Edison a copper mold, in which the cylinders of wax could be reproduced without number from a single record. The original mold is now in the possession of the younger Joyce, who as a boy aided his father in devising it. Some years ago it was returned to him by Mr. Edison as a memento. It records a popular song of the day.

The elder Joyce also assisted the late Mr. Berliner in the perfection of the wax disk for the reproduction of sound, now in common use. It employs a horizontal movement, which the needle follows in the reproduction of sound, rather than the vertical movement originally used by Mr. Edison on the cylinder records. The first of these disks also was made in Mr. Joyce's workshop, and the present inventor of the sealing device watched its workings as a young man.

Mrs. May's Funeral At Tazewell Today

Remains of Congressional Secretary's Wife Sent to Virginia.

(Associated Press.)

Funeral services for Mrs. William L. May, who died here Saturday, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at Tazewell, Va., from the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. May, the wife of the secretary to Representative Flannagan, of Bristol, Va., was stricken several weeks ago with complications that arose after a severe attack of influenza and pleurisy.

The body left here last night for Tazewell, in charge of her husband and A. G. Lacy, secretary to Representative Burch, of Martinsville. Mrs. May is survived by her husband, two small sons, her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Davis, of Washington County, Va., and two brothers and two sisters.

George Carter, 74, Dead At Home Near Farmville

Farmville, Va., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—George Carter, 74-year-old Buckingham County farmer, died at his home near here today after an illness of several weeks.

His widow, a son, J. Nat Carter, secretary of the Farmville Tobacco Board, and a sister survive. Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow afternoon from New Store Church.

Mrs. Amanda Covert Dies at 98.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 29 (Special).—Mrs. Amanda L. Covert, 98, Jefferson County's oldest matron, died at the home of a son near Peagans Mill, this county, and was buried yesterday. She was a native of Virginia. Three sons, all of this county, survive.

CLARENDON WOMAN HEADS HOME GROUP

Mrs. Noland D. Mitchell Is Honored by Chief of Interior.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 909. Clarendon, Va.

Mrs. Noland D. Mitchell, of Clarendon, has been appointed chairman of the better homes in America committee for Arlington County by the national president, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur.

In the spring of last year 9,772 committee observed national better home week. It is expected that even a larger number will have programs of contests, lectures, tours, exhibits and demonstration houses in preparation for the next national better home week, from April 23 to 30 this year.

The local committee will hold its first meeting of the spring campaign at the home of the chairman Thursday at 8 p. m. to outline activities for this year. The committee hope to hold another small house contest and exhibits of home arts work. These were the features which won honorable mention for Arlington County in the campaign last year. By enlarging these features and by enlisting the interest of more county organizations the committee hopes to be in line for one of the national prizes this year.

With professional performers featuring the revue, the Lyon Park Community Center will give its annual minstrel show in the community house Friday and Saturday nights. In addition to the special vaudeville act by Poppy Callahan and a song and dance act by Mr. and Mrs. Callahan, there will be a special dance act by Dorothy Moreland, Kay Simpson, Mary E. Carr and Rosa Evans, together with tap dancing by John Linter, soprano solos by Mrs. Amy Bustin and a special Hawaiian dance by Mrs. McDonald.

Berlin Toulotte will be interlocutor and Robert Raeburn and Russell Handley end men in the show, which has been named "Laugh Inc." Special soloists include Paul King and Arthur Orr, tenors and Henry Hartung and A. A. Moore, barytone and bass, respectively, will contribute special numbers.

The committee in charge of arrangements consists of Carleton K. Lewis, chairman; Mrs. Arthur Orr, vice chairman; Henry Hartung, Mrs. Clifford Smith, D. O. Throgmorton, Mrs. Reginald Bustin, W. M. Whitlock, Mrs. Herbert Howe, A. P. Stevens, and Norbert Melnick. Mrs. J. F. Bushong is director of music.

The Thrifton Village Improvement League holds its monthly meeting tonight in the parish hall of the Grace Episcopal Church. President G. E. H. Goodner says he will make all committee appointments at the meeting.

Founders Day will be celebrated by the Parent-Teacher Association of Clarendon School at its meeting Thursday evening. There will be a meeting of the executive committee tonight at the home of Mrs. H. J. Odenthal, 234 Marion avenue, Clarendon.

ILLUSION:
One of Napoleon's soldiers rose to fame on the "Burning Oven" trick. A roaring fire was built in an oven . . . the temperature rose to 600° F. Into the oven walked the "fire king," M. Chabert, carrying several raw steaks. A few minutes later the doors were flung wide and out he stepped . . . safe and sound . . . with the steaks thoroughly cooked.

EXPLANATION:
Heat rises. When Chabert entered the oven he hung the steaks above the fire, in the center of the oven, then dropped to the floor at the side, covering his head with a hood made from his shirt. He breathed through small air holes in the floor. When the steaks were cooked he threw back the hood, grabbed the steaks, and stepped out in triumph.

It's fun to be fooled— ...it's more fun to KNOW

"The Burning Oven" is an old illusion which has played a leading rôle in cigarette advertising. Its modern name is "Heat Treatment."

EXPLANATION: All cigarette manufacturers use the heat-treating process.

Harsh, raw tobaccos require intensive processing under high temperatures. The more expensive tobaccos, which are naturally mild, call for only a moderate application of heat.

The first Camel cigarette was manufactured under the heat-treating process. Every one of the billions of Camels produced since has received the necessary heat treatment. But remember that heat treatment never makes cheap, inferior tobacco good.

It is not in heat treatments, but in more costly tobaccos and matchless blending, that Camels find their appealing mildness and flavor.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

You sense this quality in the mildness...the distinctive flavor...of Camels.

More costly tobaccos and a matchless blend tell the story of Camel leadership in public confidence.

Try Camels. Judge them critically. Compare them with others for mildness, for throat-ease, for good taste. Key your taste to quality!

Camels come to you fresh and cool...in the air-tight, welded Humidor Pack that keeps dryness outside and freshness inside.

About The Showshops

With NELSON B. BELL

IT was remarked by this column at the time of its road show engagement at the National, that the property man for Cecil B. DeMille's spectacular production of "The Sign of the Cross" was not the least entitled to applause of all those connected with the making of the picture. That meager encomium to a craft that is little known to the public is now extended to the keeper of the gadgets for "Rasputin and the Empress," in which the Barrymores are appearing together, for the first time on the screen, at Loew's Columbia.

Ethel Barrymore.

"Rasputin and the Empress" is scarcely less impressive as an authentic reproduction of its time and place than was Mr. DeMille's re-creation of the glories that were Rome. It manages the matter of cathedrals, imperial palaces and the regal panoplies of sovereignty with remarkable completeness and fidelity. The assembling of all the material accessories of so prodigious a production is a task that is staggering to contemplate—the uniforms and accoutrements of the soldiery, the decorations of the royal household, the honorary decorations of its ruling members; the candelabra, the candles, the censers and other relics of the chapels of worship and of imposing court ceremonials; table services, gowns, jewels, and other items essential to verisimilitude, ad infinitum. And yet these are but the trappings that surround the heart, soul and fiber of the drama that is revealed in the tragic story of the downfall of a dynasty!

There are those, as seemingly is always the case, who contend that "Rasputin and the Empress" falls something short of providing drama commensurate with the combined abilities and histrionic requirements of its three distinguished stars—Ethel, Lionel and John Barrymore. This is a view with which, it seems to me, thoughtful observers should find it difficult to hold. If there could be anything more utterly tragic, more profoundly moving or more emotionally stirring than the snuffing out of the sovereign family of a royal house that has ruled for 300 years, and the resultant collapse of a whole social order, it would be interesting to know what it might be!

Probably the complaint of those with a mind to carp could be traced back to the conspicuous failure of any of the Barrymores to rant and roar and tear his hair in the approved manner of the fur-trimmed tragedian of the days of the ten-twenty-thirty and the candle-light circuits.

No Barrymore does that in "Rasputin and the Empress." Neither, I imagine, did any Romanoff during the trying days that presaged their complete and murderous extinction.

Ethel Barrymore and her brother John, to these eyes, comport themselves about as rational human beings, whether czarina and princely and faithful subject or not, would conduct themselves in the circumstances. They are poised and self-contained, but by no means impervious to the emotional excitements that harass their lives and the lives of those about them.

Lionel Barrymore.

Lionel, in the role of the mesmeric monk, perpetuates the claim he founded in "Grand Hotel" to the title of pre-eminent artist. Again upon him devolves the considerable chore of creating and sustaining an illusion wholly at variance with his own personality and tastes.

The spectacle of a man who is artist, musician and composer, in addition to actor, making real the character of a perverted interloper and tyrant, with all his belchings, regurgitations, lechery and filth, is no indifferent achievement in the art of acting.

In view of the many legends that persist of the actual man Rasputin, each about as nebulous as all the others, it would be difficult to substantiate the charge that Mr. Barrymore's picture of the fellow is not authentic.

Incidentally, one of the elder Barrymore's early scenes struck me as being about as effective as any he offered during the whole course of the drama. That was when he first exerted his hypnotic power over the suffering little czarevitch, played so well by Tad Alexander, and lulled him into reluctant sleep by twirling a glittering turnip of a watch before his fascinated gaze.

This is a scene which I venture to say Miss Frances Starr would find of unusual interest, since in its theory of hypnosis, and its application, it is identical with one in "The Case of Becky," in which she was the star under the direction of the late David Belasco.

And as long as we are on the subject, the generation that has sprung up to years of understanding since 1918, this week has an unexcelled opportunity to envision the horrendous events that shook the world from 1914, or a little before, to the signing of the armistice, and have continued to shake it sporadically, more or less ever since.

What with "The Big Drive" visualizing practically the entire four years of armed conflict on all fronts, including the Russian, in the Great War, and "Rasputin and the Empress" reproducing actual war scenes and the outbreak of revolution in Russia, as well as State reasons for Russia's attitude in the crisis, one finds it possible to reconstruct with fair comprehensiveness the entire panorama of events that shook the world out of all semblance of normalcy for what bids fair to be a period of at least a quarter of a century.

No school book can equal the lesson in history currently spread on the local screens.

One could be pardoned for hoping that both "The Big Drive" and "Rasputin and the Empress" mirror official procedures with better accuracy than "Hard to Handle," the ballyhoo burlesque, starring James Cagney at the Earle.

Not once, but several times during the action of the picture, Jimmy, in the role of "Lefty" Merrill, the pugnacious promoter, offers prizes of "Five new, crisp one hundred dollar bills, fresh from the Government mint!"

I eagerly awaited the spiel in which he would offer "Five new and shiny twenty dollar gold pieces, fresh from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing," but the Warner Brothers seem to have been content for the time being to confine their revolutionary reallocation of Government functions to the "minting" of paper money.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives and Vice President-elect of the United States, the Hon. John Nance Garner—of all people, the play's pungent pokes at the Vice Presidency being what they are—tonight will entertain a large box party at the National Theater to view "Of Thee I Sing," the political burlesque that was awarded the 1932 Pulitzer prize for drama.

Victor Moore, the veteran comedian, who plays the role of Vice President Alexander Throttlebottom in the Kaufman-Ryskind-Gershwin satire, will be the guest of the Vice President at a supper party following the play.

I trust Mr. Throttlebottom—pardon, Mr. Moore—I trust Mr. Moore will be able to find a place to sit down and will not find his name spelled out across the bottom of the check!

Which suggests that if you have not already done so, you go back and read the theater lead in the dramatic department of yesterday's issue of this staunch family journal. It may be done with utmost safety, since most of it was written by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind!

Then, of course, if you have solved the puzzle of what to use for money, there is the automobile show. And that reminds me——

Oh, Mr. Pierce, how much on an 1896 Yale bicycle toward one of those Silver Arrows?

Young Violinist Has Strong Appeal to Washington Music Lovers.

Washington musicians, music lovers and other patrons of the National Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor, gave a well deserved ovation to one of the youngest American great artists, if not the youngest, Sylvia Lent, violinist, at its concert yesterday afternoon in Constitution Hall. The girlish violinist has a very strong appeal to Washingtonians, who knew both her father, the late Ernest Lent, and her mother, Mrs. Mamie Simons Lent, having been leading factors in the musical life of Washington 30 years ago, and maybe more.

Her father was the best cellist Washington had had when he came here from Europe in the early 80s, and Mrs. Lent, as Miss Simons, was already one of the most brilliant pianists Washington had produced. She was known as a concert soloist some years before her marriage, and had played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Sylvia Lent is their youngest child, and shows plainly her musical inheritance.

Her first success with her audiences is her winsome personality. She is petite, sylph-like, with an almost childish face and head, yet with the professional poise many a much older artist lacks, and a charming beauty of face and figure. She played the concerto in B minor, of Camille Saint-Saens, a work of great beauty and a test of a violinist's skill in technique and temperament.

Her technique is both brilliant and exquisite and her harmonics as perfect as possible. It is rarely if ever one sees more beautiful and graceful bowing than she showed yesterday, and never is she lacking in the musicianly appreciation of the work she is interpreting. She plays like a much older musician. Her trills, harmonics, double stops and brilliant scales and cadenzas in thirds and sixths are beyond criticism, and she well deserved the ovation heaped upon her.

The program was chosen with rare discrimination and taste. It delighted the lover of the more popular music and did not offend the lover of the heavy class or the more unconservative modern. The overture to Mozart's "Don Giovanni" opened it and was played with delightful grace and rhythmic beauty. The piece de resistance of the orchestra's numbers was, of course, the symphony, Tschaikowsky's sixth, a composition which is a test of the orchestra's capabilities. They did it well.

Their other numbers were the lovely "Valse Triste" of Sibelius, entrancingly done, and the "Pomp and Circumstance" of Edward Elgar, which made a brilliant close to one of the best concerts Washington has heard.

THE THEATER YESTERDAY

E. M. NEWMAN

"INDIA TO CAMBODIA"—Second of five "Around the World" travel talks by E. M. Newman, illustrated by colored slides and motion pictures. Under direction of Charles Mercer. Reviewed at the National Theater Sunday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

The glories that were India, the splendors that were Ceylon and the grandeurs that were Siam were brought into high relief yesterday afternoon when E. M. Newman embarked on the second of his series of five traveltalks at the National and contrasted the old and the new in these countries of the Far East.

Nor did Mr. Newman restrict himself to the glory, splendor and grandeur of the countries included in the current itinerary, but, as is his wont, described in word and picture all phases of life encountered in the three countries, contrasting, for example, the squalid conditions among India's multitude of untouchables with the abode of the nobles and the imperishable monuments of man's creative genius.

Starting at Bombay, Mr. Newman proceeded through Delhi, the new capital of India, to Agra and the dream palaces of the Moghul rulers, thence to the holy city of the Hindus, Benares and the Ganges with its countless thousands of temples, bathing and burning ghats. From Calcutta, the tour took in Kandy, thence across the Bay of Bengal to Penang and Bangkok, with its Wat Arun and its klongs (canals) of yesteryear, closing with the great archeological mystery, the once lost city of Angkor Wat, now a mass of noble ruins mutely testifying to a greatness of a lost civilization.

With all of its beautiful palaces, mosques, the life in the city and the country, child marriages, the Cambodian priestesses—with all of these things, this part of the world is still in the mind of those who for reasons best known to themselves take their travel from an orchestra chair, is the site of the most beautiful building in the world—that consummate masterpiece of architectural design commemorating the great love of Shah Jehan, the Taj Mahal. Familiar as it is, it still elicits a round of applause, auricular evidence that a thing of beauty is a joy forever.

Coming at a time when a more general knowledge of conditions existing in India and nearby countries will become of increasing importance, this traveltalk is most opportune. While passing over the work of Mahatma Gandhi much too lightly, Mr. Newman did much to clarify the position of the untouchables, whose position in the social system of India represents one of the sore spots of modern civilization.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Wielding its glittering scalpels with fine skill, sometimes only grazing the skin, sometimes cutting deep, "Of Thee I Sing" now transfers its dissections of the body politic to the sight of audiences which, perhaps above all others, are able to understand and appreciate the full significance of its stinging satire and revel in the verity of its vivacious vivisections.

There is no doubt that Washington will "get" this gay charade. The only question is, can it "take" it?

Last night's capacity audience at the National roared a loud and long affirmative, corroborating the verdict that made this Kaufman-Ryskind-Gershwin collaboration a 55-week Broadway sell-out and the selection of the committee of judges for the Pulitzer Prize award of 1932.

Most of the weaknesses of preelection campaign methods, as well as many of the complications, both domestic and international, that arise in the conduct of our national affairs come in for a lusty lambasting in this spirited recital of the vicissitudes of an administration that was elected on a platform of love and then set to music!

During the term of office of President John P. Wintergreen and Vice President Alexander Throttlebottom—and there is a ticket for you, Wintergreen and Throttlebottom!—France, appropriately enough, is the thorn in the side of the White House. Mr. Wintergreen had made the tactical error of selecting for his domestic running mate on the idyllic platform of his party, one Mary Turner, who could make corn muffins—even make them without corn, mind you—in preference to Diana Devereaux, the "illegitimate daughter of an illegitimate son of an illegitimate nephew of Napoleon," who was the choice of the judges of the pre-campaign beauty contest at Atlantic City, in which 3,000,000 embryo Venuses donned bathing suits to see which would be First Lady of the Land!

This lapse of judgment on the part of Mr. Wintergreen eventually precipitated impeachment proceedings. Mr. Wintergreen is only restored to his country's and his party's favor when it is revealed by his wife that this is no time to pick on the President. The United States, it seems, has never impeached an expectant father!

If, perchance, you feel that this is going a bit too far with the highest office within the gift of the people, just wait until you see what they do to the Vice President, poor old Alexander Throttlebottom!

Now, there is a fellow who has himself a time trying to muscle out of the obscurity to which his position doomed him! Nobody knows him, nobody knows where he lives, nobody will let him in anywhere and he himself only finds out about presiding over the Senate by having stumbled into a tourist party being shown through the Executive Mansion. Then the guide tells him! Guides probably have their moments of weakness just like everybody else.

But these are only the highlights. Some idea of the completeness with which "Of Thee I Sing" disjoints the Federal establishment may be gathered from a recapitulation of the scenes comprising the two acts. In act one, we see a campaign torchlight procession, the national committee headquarters, both in the city and at the shore; a Madison Square Garden rally, where two wrestlers amuse the crowd while Senator Jones makes his speech; the election night returns and the marriage in Washington. Act two presents the President's office in the White House, the Capitol, the Senate, and again the White House, a corridor and the "Yellow Room."

Such jocularities occur along the way as conferences between the President and members of his Cabinet, some profound decisions by the nine judges of the United States Supreme Court (including the determination of the gender of the expected White House baby) and a number of acutely pat audiences with the French Ambassador, who has made the case of Miss Devereaux and her distinguished family tree the subject of an international exchange of notes!

There is here a coherent and pointed burlesque of the whole governmental establishment. Nothing of its pungency is lost by the fact that it is frequently interrupted by song or that occasionally whole scenes are sung in the jagged tempos that Mr. Gershwin substitutes for recitatives and reprises.

The whole joyous affair is put over with all the lusty whoop-de-do and high pressure vocalism of an actual Presidential campaign. Delicacy and finesse are not included among the requirements exacted of the cast and chorus. They cut loose for all they are worth and never let go less than both barrels at once.

It is of course known that William Gaxton is the President Wintergreen, Lois Moran, his bride, and Victor Moore, Vice President Throttlebottom. It is probably no less common knowledge that Grace Brinkley is Diana Devereaux, Florens Ames the French Ambassador, Dudley Clements the big newspaper owner, and that Sam Mann, Harold Moffet, George E. Mack, Edward H. Robins, former Washington stock favorite; George Murphy and June O'Dea are importantly cast. No need to go into the matter of how they perform their appointed tasks, for this is the identical cast that appeared in the piece throughout its New York run.

Outside of the "theme" number, "Of Thee I Sing, Baby," Mr. Gershwin has not contributed an especially melodious score. He has, however, provided a loud one.

There it is, ladies and gentlemen—take it and like it. If you can the one, you will the other! Provided, of course, the projection of the election returns, one of the bits of the show, does not again go haywire as it did last night.

It's Setting the Pace at the Auto Show

It's a Six with Floating Power at $70 to $90 less!

FIRST, Plymouth introduced new models far ahead of competition. Roomy . . . faster . . . safer . . . more economical to operate.

What happened? 30,000 cars were shipped from the factory within 30 days after the announcement.

Volume makes value. So Walter P. Chrysler reduced prices $20 and $30 on December 16th. But remember—when you go to the Auto Show—Plymouth's economy only starts with the purchase price.

Plymouth is scientifically engineered to eliminate excess weight . . . to be the most economical Six in the low-priced field.

Remember that the new Plymouth prices include Floating Power . . . patented engine mountings . . . not merely rubber cushions.

And Safety-Steel Bodies . . . as superior to the composite kind as steel railway cars are superior to old-fashioned coaches.

Not only is Plymouth a BIG, full-sized family car . . . but its 70-horsepower engine is the most brilliant performing Six in its class . . . bar none.

So look at all three . . . ride in all three . . . compare the delivered prices on all three . . . and may the best car win. Incidentally, you can buy your new license plates and plenty of gas on what you save.

GRIFFITH RECALLS NATS' 17 STRAIGHT WINS IN 1912

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

NO Washington fan is getting a greater "kick" out of The Post's current baseball contest than Clark Griffith, who has seen the ball players come and go at Griffith Stadium for the past 21 years.

At the mention of some of the great men who played with the Washington clubs of former years, Griffith's eyes light up, twinkle through his bushy brows and literally sparkle as he recalls the deeds of some of those great ball players who never had a good enough supporting cast to cash in on the fame and fortune of a pennant victory.

Griffith's memory is amazing. He can recall the scores of every important game, retains the memory of the strong and weak points of every one of the hundreds of ball players who passed through his hands, and can trace the fortunes of each club in detail through each year of the 21 pennant campaigns he has seen in Washington since leaving Cincinnati in 1911.

Johnson Opened Griff's Eyes.

"I hadn't seen Walter Johnson really pitch before I came to Washington in 1912," said Griffith. "I knew about him, of course, but from 1908 to 1911 I was a National Leaguer and it was hard to believe without seeing him with my own eyes, that Johnson was the pitcher the American Leaguers said he was.

"Of course, when I was managing the New York Yankees in 1907-1908, they were the Highlanders then, I had gotten a few glimpses of Johnson, but he was only a rookie then, with a lot of speed like lots of other rookies, and it was hard to forecast that he would be the great pitcher he was.

"But, when I took over the management of Washington in 1912 and saw Johnson work out indoors at Charlottesville during spring training, he opened my eyes. He had more speed in the raw than any other pitcher I ever laid my eyes on, and by that time he knew what to do with it. I began to understand what the American Leaguers had been raving about. He won 32 games the first year he worked for me, and 36 the next year. Ty Cobb always 'rode' him hardest and he always pitched hardest against Cobb. The way he used to bear down against Cobb was pretty to watch. Walter simply let the ball fly with that side-arm motion and Cobb was lucky if he fouled one."

First Four "Murderers' Row."

"We had some great ball players on that 1912 team," continued Griffith. "There was Danny Moeller, Eddie Foster, Clyde Milan and Chick Gandil as the first four men in the batting order. They'd upset any pitcher.

"Eddie Foster was the greatest hit-and-run man in baseball, bar none, even Willie Keeler. Moeller had the knack of getting on and the speed to run the bases and with Foster batting second we usually had a great first inning, what with Milan and Gandil coming up next.

"Eddie Ainsmith was with us in 1912, but he wasn't catching all the games. John Henry was alternating with him, but Ainsmith didn't develop until a few years later. For a catcher, he was one of the best base runners I ever saw. That team of 1912 and the 1913 club I had showed me so much good base running that at times it's hard to keep from being disgusted with modern ball players."

160-Pounders Top Week's Ring Card

Slaughter - Jones to Meet for N. B. A. Title Tonight.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Middleweights take over the chief burden of entertaining the Nation's boxing fans this week.

The National Boxing Association will crown an American 160-pound title holder at Cleveland tomorrow night in a 12-round bout between Gorilla Jones, of Akron, Ohio, and Sammy Slaughter, of Terre Haute, Ind.

Jones was recognized by the N. B. A. as world middleweight king until he was beaten in France by Marcel Thil. Slaughter has come fast in the last year and probably will be at least an even-money choice.

On the same card Ben Jeby, East Side Hebrew, who holds New York State recognition as world's middleweight champion, will battle Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, in a twelve-round semifinal, but his title will not be at stake.

Madison Square Garden's Friday night show will be featured by a ten-round nontitle match involving Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion, and Billy Townsend, hard-hitting Vancouver welterweight. Canzoneri was given permission by the New York State Athletic Commission to engage in an overweight match upon his promise to defend the 135-pound crown a little later.

Bouts on the national schedule include:

MONDAY—At Cleveland, Gorilla Jones, Akron, Ohio, vs. Sammy Slaughter, Terre Haute, middleweights, 12 (title); and Ben Jeby, New York, vs. Paul Pirrone, Cleveland, middleweights, 12 (nontitle); at Pittsburgh, Barney Ross, Chicago, vs. Johnny Datto, Cleveland, lightweights, 10; at Philadelphia, Harry Dublinsky, Chicago, vs. Eddie Cool, Philadelphia, lightweights, 10; at Boston, Andy Callahan, Boston, vs. George Salvadore, Oak Bluffs, Mass., welterweights, 12; at Chicago (White City), Frankie O'Brien, Hartford, Conn., vs. Kid Leonard, Moline, Ill., middleweights, 10; at Holyoke, Mass., Isidore Castanaga, Spain, vs. Joe Sekyra, Akron, Ohio, heavyweights, 10; at Newark, N. J., Young Terry, Trenton vs. Jack Rosenberg, New York, middleweights, 10; at Al Rossi, Silver Lake, vs. Abie Bain, Newark, light-heavyweights, each 10; at New York (St. Nicholas Arena), Innocente Balguera, Italy, vs. Frank Moriarty, New Jersey, heavyweights, and Baby Joe Gans, Los Angeles, vs. Ralph Landis, New York, welterweights, each 8.

TUESDAY—At Seattle, Leonard Bennett, Detroit, vs. Sammy Saltos, Seattle, welterweights, and Andy Bundy, Portland, Oreg., vs. Bobby Gray, Seattle, featherweights, each 8; at Los Angeles, Bobby Leitham, Montreal, vs. Little Pancho, Philippines, bantamweights, 10; at Indianapolis, George Godfrey, Leiperville, Pa., vs. Jack Fox, Terre Haute, Ind., heavyweights, 10; at West Palm Beach, Fla., Gus Campbell, Miami, vs. Rufus Miles, Columbus, Ga., welterweights, 10, and Joe Lipps, Charlotte, N. C., vs. Tommy Hambrick, Valden, Miss., light-heavyweights, 8; at Toledo, Ohio, K. O. Christner, Akron, vs. Harry Reiser, Toledo, heavyweights, 10.

WEDNESDAY—At Pittsburgh, Joe Ruggizzino, Detroit, vs. Frankie Goosby, Pittsburgh, middleweights, 10.

THURSDAY—At Philadelphia, King Levinsky, Chicago, vs. Unknown Winston, Hartford, Conn., heavyweights, 10; at Philadelphia, Jimmy Smith, Philadelphia, vs. Jackie Willis, Philadelphia, lightweights, 10; at Tacoma, Don Fraser, Spokane, vs. Babe Anderson, San Jose, welterweights, 8; at St. Paul, Mickey Patrick, Chicago, vs. Dick Daniels, Minneapolis, heavyweights, and Eskimo Clesthorn, Nome, Alaska, vs. Tom Pruett, Bookings, S. Dak., light-heavyweights, 6.

FRIDAY—At New York (Madison Square Garden), Tony Canzoneri, New York, vs. Billy Townsend, Vancouver, lightweights, 10 (nontitle); Frankie Klick, California, vs. Tony Melore, Jersey City, 6; at Detroit, Billy Wallace, Cleveland, vs. Jimmy Alvarado, Detroit, lightweights, and Tracey Cox, Indianapolis, vs. Joey Marcus, Pittsburgh, welterweights, each 10; at Philadelphia, John Lucas, Camden, N. J., vs. Johnny Jadick, Philadelphia, junior welterweights, 10 (nontitle); at Pittsburgh, Midget Wolgast, Philadelphia, vs. Jackie Wilson, Homewood, Pa., flyweights, 10 (nontitle).

Winchester Pitcher Says He Will Try With Nats

Winchester, Va., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—L. W. Cassell, 19-year-old pitcher for the Millwood Athletic Club in the Virginia Valley League, said today he had received word to join the Washington Senators for a tryout at Biloxi, Miss., next month.

Cassell, who started his baseball career in the infield was shifted to the mound and last season won most of his starts.

Green Bay, Star Pro Game Is Postponed

Los Angeles, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—A steady rainfall that made Wrigley Field unplayable today caused the postponement until next Saturday of the football game scheduled between the Green Bay Packers of the National Professional League and a picked team led by Erny Pinckert, former University of California star.

Poor Babe!

Low Salaried Fans Rush to Aid in Fight for $75,000 Contract.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—It is a noble trait of the American people that, however dark and urgent their worries may be, they can always be relied on to knock off from their own personal problems and help Babe Ruth out with his worrying. The Babe received $75,000 in pay last year, and, although the market for testimonials and journalistic margarine is not what it used to be, his by-products probably brought his earnings for the year up to a rotund $100,000.

At the normal rate of interest, this amount of money would yield an income considerably larger than the most optimistic estimate of the average pay of the sport writers and sport editors in a hundred cities around the country who will now help Babe Ruth to view with alarm the proposal to cut his pay by $25,000 in 1933.

Babe Not One to Reciprocate.

There are also thousands of honorary, free style viewers-with-alarm whose income for 1932 fell much below the wages of the Babe's bat caddy, Eddie Bennett, yet, when the signal sounded, they came a-running from all such trivial worries as the interest on the mortgage, the day's groceries and the baby's medicine to add their indignation to his own.

It is a gorgeous way to do but it is fortunate that they do not ask him to reciprocate because the Babe's own capacity for worry is strictly nominal and he couldn't begin to return the favor.

At the very hour when the blow was hurting the people worst, the Babe, himself, was photographed hauling on his golf pants in preparation for his daily 54 holes and there was that about his manner which suggested confidence and ease of spirit. He has been through such crises before and he has always come to an agreeable meeting ground just about midway between the price bid and the price asked. This time it will be about $60,000 for the year, plus pickings, or somewhat more per week than the rank and file of his sympathizers may count upon as income for the entire year. Things could be worse.

Millionaire's Income But Heroic Slave.

Although this income undoubtedly will exceed that of most financiers for 1933, there is no disposition to classify the Babe among the evil class known as the rich. By a happy exception he enjoys the comforts and the income of a millionaire and the popular status of a heroic slave with nothing to lose but his chains.

I dislike those people who interrupt a drama to tell how the story ends, but in the present case a good deal of honest concern is being wasted and I think the citizens have a right to know that everything will be all right in the last chapter. The signing of Babe Ruth consists of a double ceremony something like a royal wedding.

True, they haggle around a bit, next to pure reading matter, but presently the Babe hops into a taxi and whoas up at the brewery where Jake Ruppert, his employer, has his business office, and there they decide agreeably what it is to be. The civil ceremony is then performed with privacy and dignity befitting a deal of such dimensions between parties of such girth and each one keeps a copy of the contract signed by the other.

Ceremony Staged on Some Dull Day.

The second ceremony awaits some otherwise dull day for the papers and the news reels and is then brought off in the downtown offices of the Yankee ball club, with a full line-up of sport writers, photographers and habitual dancers-in-the-streets.

The Babe signs his name with a dry fountain pen to a document which may be an old form letter picked out of the waste basket and Jake writes his on the back of an insurance circular. The exact words of the happy couple are taken down in 20 widely differing versions by 20 of us trained observres from the press and all is serene again except that one of the moving picture crews discover that they forgot to turn on the heat in their machine. Therefore, will Ruth and Jake be good enough to do it over again, precisely as before?

Willing to oblige, they do, with unimportant variations and the extras soon come hopping up out of the newspaper cellars yelling "Ruth signs" with one or more exclamation points, or holy Moses marks, for dramatic emphasis. The American standard of harmless nonsense has been maintained and the citizens are demobilized from the emergency to return to

Punch Added To School Series

Central - Tech Battle Tomorrow Awaited; Play-Off Looms.

AFTER starting off as if the boys were just trying to look pretty, rather than play real basket ball, the current interhigh series has stirred up a genuine interest among the high school sports patrons and there are indications that Tech's Gym will be packed to the rafters both tomorrow when Central plays the host team, and Friday, when Eastern is the visiting attraction.

Of course there will be two additional games, but they are of little consequence, have no bearing on the outcome of the race, and will be played simply to provide more work for the official scorer.

Should Eastern and Central tie for the honors, with Tech possibly figuring in a triple tie, there will be a play-off for the first time since that memorable series of 1926. Eastern and Central ran a dead heat for the title that year in a series of Saturday morning games played at the Old Arcade. A play-off was decided on and it ended in no contest when the crowd swarmed on the floor.

Failed to Play-Off 3 Years Ago.

These same teams figured in another tie two years ago, by an odd twist of fate, but feeling among supporters of the schools was at such a high pitch the authorities decided to forego a play-off. But this year, according to John Paul Collins, chairman of the board of faculty advisors, a play-off there will be.

Central must win from Tech tomorrow, to assure itself of at least a tie. Tech must down both Central and Eastern to share the honors with them.

Fans who recall the game will remember that the advisory period ended Friday. Boys who failed in studies became ineligible the following Monday. Those who had been ineligible and passed, qualified for participation in sports Monday also.

Waverly Wheeler, who had been eligible and failed in one of his studies, it must have been elocution, was benched by Coach Artie Boyd in favor of Artie Willison, who had been unqualified, but to whom the marks, announced Friday, brought glad tidings. It simply was a mistake. Tech beat Central with Willison in the line-up, and the game was forfeited, although had Wheeler been retained, the outcome probably would have been the same.

Plan to Decide Title Discarded.

The incident caused such hard feelings on both sides, plans for the proposed play-off were abandoned.

Coach Bert Coggins admits he hates to lose Jack Moulton, who graduates tonight, but he is positive in his assertions that Keyser is as good as Moulton in every respect, possibly a trifle steadier under fire. Keyser was playing great ball before his marks were tried and found wanting. He should fit in with the team.

Some doubts lurked in the minds of Central followers that Keyser would become eligible today, but Coggins dismissed the suggestion with the quip, "Yes, and it may snow tomorrow."

Well, it may, at that.

POST MORTEMS . . .

John Henry, old Washington catcher, got his job one day when two Washington backstops were hurt . . . Henry was a Georgetown student and was sitting in the grandstand when Jimmy McAleer, then managing the Nats, pressed him into service . . . the Watson-Labarba fight which drew 10,000 at the Madison Square Garden was an illustration of crowd psychology . . . so poor was Watson's showing in the gymnasium, that it was doubtful if he would receive permission of the boxing commission to take the fight . . . but the commission approved the bout on the grounds that the public was already aware of his poor showing and that if the fans did not choose to see him fight Labarba, they could stay away . . . so 10,000, one of the Garden's best crowds, turned out. The mountain would not come to Mohamet and so Mohamet went to the mountain . . . and so it was in Joe Judge's case. Not hearing from the Brooklyn Club, he hopped a rattler and hustled to Dodgers' headquarters . . . and he landed the first base job at $10,000 per . . .

Facts on Joe Judge were included in the neatly printed 1933 roster of the Brooklyn Club which arrived here in last night's mail . . . Cy Hogarth, the boy who tossed the basket that caused the Eastern-Central play-off game to be argued off the Arcade court in 1926, saw Eastern upset Central last week . . . Ellis Goodman, now employed at the Arcadia alleys and still pitching sandlot ball, is authority for the statement that the famed Kanawahs, who starred in baseball, football and basket ball here did not have a boy who smoked in the gang over a period of eight years . . . Lee Kennedy, who fights Marty Gallagher at Portner's, was a coal miner . . . and Marty once took the part of a policeman in a play.

G. W. Battles Quantico Marines

Game Here Tonight to Start Busy Week for Colleges.

FOLLOWING eight days of inactivity, George Washington's band of 6-footers will snap back into action tonight on its home court, with the Devildogs from Quantico furnishing the opposition at 8:30 o'clock.

The game between the Colonials and Marines is the only athletic event slated tonight on the District college program, although after Saturday fourteen contests in all will have been played.

G. W. will be performing for the first time since Saturday night a week ago when it lost a heart-breaking game to the nationally famous St. John's College of Brooklyn, 36 to 35. The Johnnies were forced to travel five extra minutes before eking out a victory—one of the most thrilling battles in G. W. history.

Colonials Won Earlier Game.

Earlier in the season the Colonials jaunted down to Quantico and defeated the Marines. Coach Jim Pixlee may open with his reserves, although he is duty-bound to shoot in his varsity composed of Wick Parrack and Forrest Burgess, forwards; Ty Hertzler, center; Wayne Chambers and Otts Zahn, guards. Parrack scored 9 points against St. John's, and is still maintaining an average of over 12 points per game. Burgess tallied 15 points in the last game.

Saturday night G. W. will play host to Elon College, hailing from a little hick town in North Carolina.

Tomorrow night the Marines move over to Brookland for a tilt with Catholic University and Maryland resumes its rivalry with the Cavaliers of Virginia at Charlottesville, while on Friday night the Shipley-coached quintet will clash with its second Southern Conference foe when it battles the University of North Carolina at Ritchie Coliseum Saturday night, the 1932 confernce champions, the bulldogs of Georgia, will roar their challenge at Maryland at Ritchie Coliseum.

Brandt, Capital Boy, Invades.

When North Carolina opposes Maryland a former Central High School star will be in the ranks of the downhomers. He is George Brandt, jr., at present one of their outstanding athletes.

Georgetown meets Temple at Tech High in an Intercollegiate Basket Ball League Wednesday night. Gallaudet swings into Philadelphia Thursday for a game with Philadelphia College. On Thursday night American University and Randolph-Macon clash in a Virginia Conference contest at the former's gym, and Gallaudet plays Upsala at East Orange, N. J.

The program is heavy for Saturday, with both G. W. and Maryland playing at home. The Old Liners also engage Duke in boxing. Catholic University meets Baltimore University and Gallaudet tackles Long Island at Brooklyn.

MERCURYS CHALLENGE.

The Mercury 138-pounders want games with teams having gyms. The Boys Club five is especially challenged. Call Met. 4621 between 5:30 and 6 p. m.

First Ace

Here of 1933 Is Reported at Beaver Dam by Frank Hessler.

The first reported hole-in-one in the District for 1933 was made yesterday afternoon on the eighth of the extra 9-hole course at Beaver Dam by Frank E. Hessler.

Measuring 150 yards, the hole is made difficult by a ditch running parallel to the green. Hessler, playing over a wind-swept course, employed his mashie in scoring the ace—the first in his life. The ball dropped 2 feet from the cup and trickled in.

Witnesses were W. B. Canfield, J. M. Crown and Bill O'Brien, who were playing with Hessler in a foursome. The hole-in-one helped him to finish the nine in 35, even par.

A number of golfers wielded their approach shots with unerring accuracy the past few days over the Beaver Dam course, hailed as one of the hardest and toughest in the District.

George Clark, the former Birmingham, Ala., golfer, played the course for the first time last week and holed out a 60-yard mashie from the rough on the 416-yard thirteenth for a birdie 3.

Playing the 138-yard fourteenth, Earl Sechrest came within 3 inches of scoring a hole-in-one yesterday. W. H. White sank a 75-yard mashie on the eighteenth for a birdie, and Cliff Spencer, pro, niblicked in from 50 yards on the third hole yesterday while playing with Martin McCarthy, Dan Pratt and William La Bille.

Grid Coach Body To Discuss Rules

Leading Mentors to Attend Meeting in New York on Saturday.

New York, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—The rules committee of the American Football Coaches Association will meet at the New York Athletic Club next Saturday to discuss what changes, if any, need to be made in the playing code for 1933, Chairman Lou Little, of Columbia, announced today.

Leading coaches from various sections of the country and five outstanding prep and high school mentors will attend the meeting. The coaches, at that time, will give definite instructions to their delegates who will sit with the national football rules committee a week later. Little, Noble Kizer, of Purdue, and Howard Jones, of Southern California, will represent the coaches at the meeting of the national committee.

Among members of the general committee expected to attend Saturday's meeting, in addition to Little, are Bill Alexander, of Georgia Tech; Hartley (Hunk) Anderson, Notre Dame; Bernie Bierman, Minnesota; H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, Princeton; Glimour Dobie, Cornell; Dick Hanley, Northwestern; Harry Kipke, Michigan; Noble Kizer, Purdue; Elmer Layden, Duquesne; Harry Mehre, Georgia; Tuss McLaughry, Brown; Paul Schissler, Oregon State; Harry Stuhldreher, Villanova; Dr. Jock Sutherland, Pittsburgh; Howard Jones, Southern California; Capt. L. M. (Biff) Jones, Louisiana State.

In addition, John F. (Chick) Meehan, Manhattan; Mal Stevens, Yale; Jim Crowley, New Fordham coach; Howard Cann, New York University, and Herb McCracken, Lafayette, have been invited. Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, new coach at Temple, has accepted an invitation to be present.

Arizmendi and Miller To Fight February 21

Los Angeles, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Formality of signatures to articles out of the way, Baby Arizmendi, the pride of Mexico, and Freddie Miller, Cincinnati southpaw, will have until February 21 to get in trim for their fight here in the Olympic stadium.

That date, the day before the Jackie Fields-Young Corbett world championship welterweight bout, was agreed upon by Jack Boyle, promoter, and the contestants' managers.

Miller, the National Boxing Association featherweight champion, was guaranteed $5,000. Arizmendi will share in the profits on a sliding scale basis.

The featherweights will be required to come in at 126 pounds.

BORED BY CRICKET.

Sydney, Australia (A.P.).—Wives of the American tennis players, Vines, Allison and Van Ryn, watched the Englishmen and Australians at play in their national game—cricket—but were bored. "Baseball has real thrills, but cricket has none," said Mrs. Vines.

Feats of Old-Time Stars Retold as Aid to Fans in Post's Baseball Contest

"BATTERIES—for Washington—Johnson and Ainsmith!"

That was the announcement that sent the blood tingling through Washington fans every fourth day of the American League pennant campaign in 1912, those stirring days that saw the dawn of a new era for the chronically last-place Washington Club which that year turned the race into a form upheaval which saw the club finish second after a stirring battle with the Boston Red Sox and Philadelphia Athletics for the flag.

Those are the days that are recalled by The Post's current baseball contest in which Washington fans are challenged to match the selection of Clark Griffith, who on March 19 will announce his all-time all-star line-up of Washington players during the span of his 21 years as manager and owner of the Nats, from 1912 to 1932, inclusive.

Fans Given Chance to Win Box Seats.

Before announcing his selection in The Post, Mr. Griffith, in cooperation with The Post, is giving the fans of the Capital an opportunity to make their own selections of the outstanding players at each position who saw service with the Washington Club between 1912 and 1932, with the winners to be rewarded with box seats to the opening game of the 1933 season between Washington and Philadelphia.

To the fan who matches correctly or most nearly correctly, the team selected by Mr. Griffith, including four pitchers and two catchers, The Post will present eight box seats to the inaugural game, with four box seats the reward of second place and two box seats the prize for third.

Until Bucky Harris led the 1924 Nats to their first American League pennant, the team of 1912 was the team that Griffith liked best to recall. That was the team Griffith said he liked to remember, with Johnson as the ace of its pitching staff, and old favorites in Milan, McBride and Eddie Foster, forming integral parts, that set a new major league record by winning 17 consecutive games, 16 on the road, during late May and early June, 1912, which sent Washington fans into joyous paroxysms.

Griffith Quickly Got Rid Of Dead Wood.

That was Griffith's first year in Washington, when he came from Cincinnati to cut loose much of the dead wood that had made Washington a consistent seventh and eighth place club, releasing such veterans as Gabby Street, Pitcher Dolly Gray, Outfielder Doc Gessler and Infielders Kid Elberfeld and Wid Conroy.

Eddie Foster, third base.
Clyde Milan, center field.
Chick Gandil, first base.
Eddie Ainsmith, catcher.
Walter Johnson, pitcher.
Bob Groom, pitcher.
Tom Hughes, pitcher.
Carl Cashion, pitcher.
Joe Engel, pitcher.
Paul Musser, pitcher.

There was also John Henry, who alternated with Ainsmith as catcher, and Rip Williams, third-string backstop. Germany Schaefer was the utility infielder.

Plenty of Speed on Nats Of 1912.

That was a smart team, that club of 1912, that had some of the best base runners in the league in Milan, Moeller, McBride, Shanks, Morgan, Foster and Ainsmith, and perhaps the greatest hit-and-run batter in the league in Foster, who always hit in second place.

That was the year before Johnson reached the top of his form in 1913, when he won 36 games and lost 7, but in 1912 he had a fairish sort of record, with 33 victories and 12 defeats.

Johnson started off the Nats' great winning streak by beating the Red Sox in Boston in the second game of the Decoration Day double-header by 6-0, after young Joe Engel had lost the first game, 3-2. After that the Nats didn't lose a game on the road, winning 15 games in series in Detroit, St. Louis, Cleveland and Chicago.

Griffith's policy was to start Long Tom Hughes in the first game, Bob Groom in the second game, one of the youngsters, Engel or Musser, in the third game, due to Cashion's sore arm, and Johnson in the fourth game. By the time Johnson's turn to work had come, the opposition was usually taking it on the lam.

President Taft and 20,000 See No. 17 Recorded.

President William Howard Taft and 20,000 other fans were among the overflow throng that saw Washington win its seventeenth straight game by beating Philadelphia here in the days before the concrete bleachers were erected in the outfield. The streak finally was snapped when the Athletics beat the Nats in a double-header the next day in Philadelphia.

The Post's contest has already stirred the memories of Washington fans if the early volume of entries is any indication. And continuing every day until March 19, The Post will publish another of the series of contest articles, recalling the past and present greats of Washington baseball history. The accompanying coupon, with space for your own selections in the contest, is for your convenience. You may be one of the fans to see the opening game of 1933 from a box seat as the guest of The Post.

PRANTE, MARINE HEAVYWEIGHT, TO SHOW AT PORTNER'S

Retzlaff Stopped Winning Streak at 22; Weighs 200.

Bout Is Semifinal to Gallagher-Kennedy Clash Tuesday.

By DAVE HERMAN.

A NEW heavyweight will be introduced to Portner's Arena fistic patrons Tuesday night when Emil Prante, pride of the Marines, comes down from Philadelphia to encounter Bob Tow, Birmingham battler, in the semiwindup to the main eight-round fight between Les Kennedy, of Montana, and Marty Gallagher, of Washington.

Weighing around 200 pounds, Prante is reported to be a stiff puncher, with lots of dash and color. They say he piled up a record of 22 straight wins around the Quaker City before Charlie Retzlaff applied the brakes in five rounds.

Prante Replaces Weiner.

Prante is fighting in a substitute role, replacing Herman Weiner, Baltimore heavyweight, whose hand continues to give him trouble. Tow and Prante will fight eight rounds. They promise to furnish as much scrapping action as Gallagher and Kennedy in the headline bout. Tow, incidentally, won an eight-round decision over Gallagher at Twin City last July, and gave Joe Knight a struggle for three rounds until the Southern champion blasted him on a nerve back of his ear. Tow passed out in agony.

Jimmy Erwin, tall Texan, is managing Tow and reports great improvement in the Southerner's fighting. Erwin also is handling Kennedy for the Montanan's Chicago manager, Joe Glazer. Both Kennedy and Tow concluded their training with vigorous workouts yesterday at Portner's. Gallagher tapered off at Frankie Mann's gym.

While boxing fans are waiting for Gallagher and Kennedy to mix, they will be presented a tough preliminary boy in Bucky Taylor, who takes on Billy Essinger in the main six-round preliminary.

Taylor Pleased Crowd Last Spring.

Taylor fought Essinger at Portner's last April and stole the show with his whirlwind attack. Taylor won the decision. A showman and willing mixer, Taylor is built along the lines of Buster Brown.

In the other preliminary bouts, Cary Wright, who continues along the unbeaten path, opposes Sailor Leonard, and Marino Marini fights Charlie Parker. Both are four-rounders.

Tickets are on sale at Vic's.

Boxing Bits Hereabouts

ARE boxers superstitious?

The answer is yes.

There seems to be that certain something that forces a fighter to believe that it has a lot to do with his fortunes in the prize ring.

From John L. Sullivan up to the present fistic era fighters have been known to have peculiarities that are nothing more than superstitions.

For instance, why do some scrappers, meaning topnotchers, boys who have earned a good living in the fight racket, enter the ring with trunks so tattered and torn that they are disgraceful? They are dear to the fighter. He will not wear any others. He believes that to put on brand-new trunks means to lose the fight. When forced to use official trunks prescribed by the New York Boxing Commission he puts up quite a squawk.

He's superstitious. That's all.

There was Jack Dempsey, the "Manassa Mauler," who possessed a ragged old sweater—to—him an omen of good luck every time he fought. It adorned Dempsey's back every time he entered the ring, and he won as he wore it.

Dempsey's Sweater Brought Up.

Then what happened? Estelle Taylro, Jack's pretty bride, bought him a nice new white sweater. Dempsey wore it the night he fought Tunney in the Philadelphia "Battle of the Century."

Dempsey lost.

A boxer by the name of Martin Levandowski wore one of Stanley Ketchel's sweaters for good luck on Friday, the thirteenth. It didn't help him. James J. Braddock beat him up.

And the New Jersey assassin, meaning Mr. Braddock, is superstitious about initials, claiming that unless a boxer has a "J" in his name somewhere he will never become champion. Quite true. There are Jack Johnston, Jess Willard, James Joseph (Gene) Tunney, and Jack Sharkey. Then there was Max Schmelling, without a J in his name.

Some fighters are superstitious about entering the ring first. They prefer waiting until their opponent comes in and makes his bow. Others are so temperamental they do not wish to be introduced first by the announcer.

From a local standpoint there are a number of fighters who have unusual superstitions.

Midget Smith, flashy little bantamweight, back in the days when Joe Lynch was the boss of the 118-pounders, wouldn't enter the ring unless he tied his baby's shoes on the ropes in his corner, believing that brought him good luck.

Roddy Davis Has Hunches.

Roddy Davis, star lightweight, says you should never buy anything new when you have a winning streak. Davis became even more superstitious about this when he lost by a knockout in the first round to Britton at Portner's Arena—his first defeat after eleven straight victories. Davis had on new shoes.

Doug Swetnam demands that his second put his left glove on first and tie it before he touches his right glove.

Barefoot Green, Fredericksburg light heavyweight, carries a rabbit's left foot. The rabbit was killed beneath a light blue moon, says he.

When Harry Groves, popular local trainer, was fighting he used to put new white strings in his shoes.

Groves is superstitious to the extent of wearing only black neckties when seconding a fighter. He says that black and white have been his lucky colors and red shoes his hoodoo.

There was a fighter around this way who couldn't fight without chewing gum. When he lost his cud in the heat of the struggle his opponent, referee and several handlers had a hard time preventing him from jumping out of the ring. His seconds always had copious chewing gum in his corner.

Shaking hands with the left hand is considered by some figters as not only a bad omen, but somewhat of an insult.

AT THE POST

with Bill Bennings

DEAR AL: MIAMI, JANUARY 29.

Things improved muchly here Saturday. In fact, I've never seen such a beautiful day at the races. A warm and hospitable sun . . . enough breeze to sway Mr. Widener's palm trees . . . the lights twinkling as the totalisator registered the bets . . . the well-groomed horses and better groomed jockeys . . . the birds were singing . . . every one seemed friendly. Of course, the fact that Bill Bennings had five winners had nothing whatever to do with it. And Mike returned. Yes, sir, old Mike, whom I kicked out with orders not to come back until he found a 10-to-1 shot, walked into the press box, broke as usual, but apparently happy. Mike gets a breather until tomorrow's third race when Lady Bracadale, his hot thing, goes. He says this one hasn't been out the State and is primed for a killing. We shall see what we shall see. BILL.

FIRST RACE—Sticking to CONTRIBUTE in the opener. This one had a lot of trouble last out and needs only to escape interference today to make a strong bid for this purse. MISS CORRINE has exhibited her good form and may take the place money from VISHNU.

SECOND RACE—IDOLATRY probably will draw Coucci as the rider today. This baby is well bred and has a little experience. May show something of that speed that has been reported in trials. JESTING QUEEN is another which comes from excellent racing stock. DISTRUST was crowded the last time.

THIRD RACE—LADY BRACADALE must take the measure of BLACK SHEEP in this maiden sprint. This one never lived up to the fine things that had been predicted but seems second best of this bad lot. NUTRIMENT showed a flash of finishing speed here and should be third.

FOURTH RACE—ESPINETTA, the game youngster who gave them all a fit in Maryland last fall, is ready for a good effort. This one had an airing here the other day and jogged through in good shape. Seems ambitiously placed, but I have to string along. CATHOP woke up for me the last time and missed. May be second again. BIG BEAU for the show.

FIFTH RACE—NOSE IN seems to have the class edge on this field. Drops down a notch and may take it all. EVERFAIR, an old friend of mine, for the place award ahead of the improved IREDELL.

SIXTH RACE—NUTLET gets in this with 97 pounds and off that last performance, which was mighty encouraging, figures to be right up there fighting for this purse. BICHLORIDE, another that was second last out, has the edge on ABSOLUTE for the show unless it rains.

SEVENTH RACE—THE POINT wins when everything is ready and that may or may not be the case tomorrow. However, I like him a little better than CAMP PRINCE, a fellow that goes slumming in this. FOR DEARBORN will be ready to win if the tops make any mistakes.

SWEDES WIN OVER EAGLE FIVE, 32-30

Aeroes' Late Rally Is Futile; Trail by 18-9 at Half.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

OLSON'S home-grown Swedes, fresh from the old country of eastern Pennsylvania, came snorting into town with the wind yesterday, outpointed the Aero Eagles in a game at the George Washington Gym by a score of 32 to 30, and continued on their way to greener pastures, all within the space of a few hours.

Mr. Swede Olson, proprietor and general manager of the team, did not accompany it. According to information gleaned from a reliable source, Mr. Olson's automobile burst into flames while making a four-point landing in the garage the other day, leaving him without means of transportation. But he will be here when his other team, the Western division of Olson, Inc., plays the Eagles next month.

But the Swedes didn't need the big Swede yesterday. They had that rheumatic old girl Dame Fortune on their side, and when the good dame takes up arms the opposition might just as well lay its own down.

Farrell's Shot Falls To Drop.

Luck, bad luck, and breaks of the game, bad breaks, beat the Eagles yesterday. The ball simply refused to go through the hoop for the District tossers. The Eagles might have earned a tie, at least, when Tubbs Farrell let fly at the basket in the last 30 seconds of play. The sphere ricocheted back and forth between the rim on the inside, as if giving the customers a thrill, before easing through and tying the score. Evidently it realized it was in the wrong goal, as it started to drop and bounced out into the hands of a Swede.

Only three seconds of play remained. The Swedes took time out, and when the game was resumed, froze the ball that length of time in the back court to take the decision.

Roy Richeson, who looked as though he may have had a grandfather whose uncle's brother knew somebody with a Swedish accent back in the gay nineties, was the star of the game. Richeson scored nine points and directed the team's attack in admirable fashion.

Pete Pettigrew, a handsome rogue, looking like a physical culture ad from a wild west magazine, was another who made a good appearance. He ban do notting but pick off Joe Sweeney all afternoon.

Olsons Gained Big Lead.

Olson's got out in front at the start and was never threatened until the last three minutes. The score at the half was 18-9. Near the end they ran the count to 30-18, and it was at this juncture that the Eagles opened up.

Sweeney, Zimmerman, Bennis and Farrell contributed to the score. By dropping the only two fouls awaarded him, Farrell ran his string to 11 in 13 tries for two games.

Wednesday the Eagles meet Lustine-Nicholson, of Hyattsville, at 8 o'clock at the George Washington gym.

In a preliminary game Sholl's disposed of Utah State Society by a score of 52-22. Bobby Lucas and Joe Robey led the scoring, while Sammy Hook played his usual stellar floor game.

TRINITY COURTMEN WIN.

"Punch" O'Hara's shot from midcourt, coming in the last minute of play, enabled the Trinity five to nose out the Brooks Club, 22 to 21, yesterday in a hotly contested game at Gonzaga High School. Trinity has a gym available tomorrow night and would like to book a game. Call West 2699-J.

SOCCER LEAD INCREASED BY GRAYS

Brandywine Routed, 9 to 1; Three Other Games Played.

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS GRAYS increased their lead in the Capital City Soccer League yesterday by overwhelming Brandywine, 9 to 1, on the Silver Spring Field.

J. McBain and L. Koennel featured for the victorious Grays by scoring 5 and 2 goals, respectively. Townsend and Zollenhorfer stood out for Brandywine.

Lewis, center, led the Columbia Heights Blacks to a 3-2 victory over Rockville on a sloppy field.

With ten minutes to go, Lewis sifted through a flock of Rockville players and kicked in a goal from 20 yards —the deciding goal of the game. Lewis counted two of his team's three points.

In the Recreation League, W. Simonds' two goals enabled Rosedale to beat New York avenue, 2 to 1, while Dux A. C. turned back Bloomingdale, 3 to 0.

Colored High Series Play Resumed Today

Cardoso calshes with Dunbar today at the Garnet-Patterson Gym as the colored high school teams resume their quest for basket ball supremacy. Cardoso, lodged in the cellar, hopes to score its first victory at the expense of its rival. Douglass High School is leading the race with two wins and one defeat.

Jackson, Dunbar forward, tops the individual scoring list with a total of 25 points. Patterson, of Douglass, and Hall, of Armstrong, are tied for second with 18.

Kit Klein Wins U. S. Speed Skating Crown

Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Kit Klein, of Buffalo, N. Y., this afternoon won the national amateur speed skating championship for women. She clinched her claim to the title by winning the half-mile race from Rose Marie Brady, of Detroit, at the meet at Fowler Lake. Miss Klein finished with 70 points to 60 for Miss Brady.

The juvenile meet championship was won by Ken Kesselberg, Chicago, whose three firsts netted him 90 points. He was followed by Carl Fried, Chicago, with 40 points.

Bernie Cannata, of Chicago, won the title of the junior division, scoring 110 points. Finishing after him were Jim McElroy, Cleveland, 70 points, and Bob Dusseau, St. Louis, 60.

Leo Friesinger, of Chicago, skated off with the championship of the intermediate division, scoring 80 points to 60 for Marvin Swanson, Minneapolis, who finished in second place.

Melvin Johnson, of Detroit, outraced the best of America's skating amateurs and won the men's championship.

Johnson scored 110 points and Miss Klein 70. Charles Delphier, a Detroit teammate of Johnson, finished second in the men's division with 90 points.

22 Spanish Football Kibitzers Hurt in Fall

Madrid, Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Twenty-two persons were injured, several seriously, today in the collapse of an embankment where a crowd of several hundreds of football fans had gathered to watch a game at Charmartin Field, directly opposite.

The collapse occurred just before an important game between Madrid and Espanol clubs. A cordon of guards was drawn around the scene of the accident while the injured were being rescued.

The embankment has been a vantage point for persons too poor to pay admission into the field.

CASEYS BEAT ST. MARTIN'S

Knights of Columbus Catholic Boys Club 145-pound tossers scored an easy victory over St. Martin's yesterday, winning by a score of 38-8 in a dull game.

Second-Guess Season Nears With Burden on Joe Cronin

Training Camp Next Month Offers New Nat Leader Opportunities to Make First and Biggest Managerial Mistakes.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

IF there is one thing the average human likes better than second guessing, it is more second guessing, and this is one reason why baseball is the national pastime. Not only is the game itself crammed full with opportunities for the fans to ask why didn't the manager do this or that, after the first guess has failed, but the season lasts practically three-fourths of the year, when the spring training trip is taken into consideration.

Thus, one might say that Washington's 1933 second-guessing season starts in less than a month, and Joe Cronin, Washington's boy manager, can not help but feel a little trembly in his boots as the time nears for him to take his first filing as teampilot.

The training trip is a big vacation for some of the regulars—those who have kept in fair physical condition during the off season and so have no fear of being punished by Trainer Mike Martin. For the rookies, it means a chance to land a job in their chosen profession, while for the manager, especially one new at the game, as is Cronin, it's nothing more or less than a pain in the neck.

Cronin Due Busy Session.

Besides getting himself into playing condition, it will be up to the "San Francisco Kead" to know more and see more than a Fatbe newsreel. It is here that he is presented opportunities, for not only his first but his biggest mistakes—those having to do with separating the sheep from the goats, and, after that, deciding which of the latter class have the best chance of filling in as substitutes.

It takes experience to do this without making mistakes and Cronin has not had this experience. As a matter of fact, deciding upon which of the rookies to be retained is more or less of a lottery and, if any one doubts this, let him look up the record of John McGraw, the former "little Napoleon" of baseball who used to pilot the New York Giants. You can not count on all of your fingers and toes the youngsters he was wrong on when he first had them, and later bought back after realizing his mistakes.

And, these managerial mistakes are only natural. Take the case of two equally efficient fielding young flyhawks trying for the position of No. 5 outfield. One gets off on the right foot at bat, has several breaks the few times he is called on, and looks like a million dollars. At the same time, his rival strikes out a couple of times and gets but few safeties. Naturally the later gets the gate. Frequently, the man kept flivvers before the training season is over, while the one sent away hits his stride, is grabbed by some other team and only a year or two later is a major league star.

Must Make Quick Decisions.

That's what a manager is up against in the Sunny South in the spring. He runs into the same difficulties with respect to picking his infielders and catchers and even more when he tries to cull the best pitchers from his rookie squad. Some of the young moundsmen round to form faster than others, the result being that they frequently catch the leader's eye first and he never "sees" several others who maybe do not reach their pinnacle until after they have been cut loose from the squad.

If examples are wanted, attention might be called to the fact that practically all of the league's heavy hitters are slower reaching their batting form than the snap ones. Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Al Simmons, Jimmy Foxx, Dale Alexander and Goose Goslin invariably look like the worst batters in the world in the early weeks at camp, while they are working to get perfect timing. Because they are stars, the manager does not worry about them but, in the case of a slugging type of rookie, it's just too bad.

Regarding the same contention with respect to pitchers, the case of Bill Morrell might be pointed out. Several seasons back, Bill trailed the other rookies so far that he did not look to be even a good minor league prospect. Harris bore with him, however, he caught up with the more precautious hopefuls and that year he was the only one of the crop to stick the entire season with the Nats.

Griffith Has Warned Cronin.

President Clark Griffith, generalissimo of the home guard, already has preached this sermon to Cronin but, even so, he probably will make some mistakes. Then again, there is another phase which the young lead must guard against—that of having too strong preconceived ideas. Managers are too prone to get sweet on a player, to mentally alibi for him, and thus give him the edge over some better piece of ivory.

There are a hundred other opportunities for managerial mistakes, many of which are made but are never heard about, but those mentioned above are the major ones and, if Cronin gets through this, his first season in the driver's seat, without giving the second-guessers a break in these respects he truly will be a marvel.

Mrs. Greenfield Joins Women Senior Golfers

Women golfers of the District will be interested in knowing that Mrs. William H. Greenfield, of the Baltimore Country Club, has been made a member of the United States Senior Women's Golf Association.

Her name was proposed for membership by Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, of Chevy Chase, former president of the District of Columbia Golf Association, who was the first woman in this section to join the select women's senior body. Membership is by invitation. Mrs. William Stephen Corby, of Columbia, is the only other member in this section.

Mrs. Greenfield has been active in Middle Atlantic golf circles for a number of years, and has won many prizes as medalist and runner-up in her club championships.

Mangin, Bell Winners In All-South Doubles

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Sensational serving and equally thrilling net play today carried Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., and Berkeley Bell, of New York to the doubles championship of the all-South tennis tournament here.

They defeated George M. Lott, of Chicago, the tournament singles champion, and Jimmy Van Alen, of Palm Beach, in

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE Holland Tunnel through which so many Washington motorists pass on their way to New York is equipped with photronic cells which indicate the presence of excessive smoke or gas in the tube, automatically starting up the ventilating blowers. Other installations of these photo-sensitive cells safeguard the various tunnel entrances against trucks of such excessive height as would strike the ceiling if allowed to enter. Across each entry passage a beam of light is projected at the critical height, focused on a photocell, which controls a relay and bell in the police booth where tickets are sold.

If a truck entering in the line has any part projecting so high as to intercept this beam, the bell starts ringing in the police booth and continues ringing until reset, giving ample warning against selling the truck driver a ticket until the clearance situation has been corrected.

Tests made to determine the dependability of this photocell entrance guard showed that it would start the bell ringing if a truck or car moving at 30 miles per hour, carried a projecting stick only 1 inch in diameter.

Richard Crooks, tenor, will be the voice of Firestone soloist (WRC, 8:30 o'clock) tonight. He will open the program with Kreisler's "The Old Refrain," followed by "Gypsy Moon," "Tell Me Tonight" and an aria from "Pagliacci." As a special feature of the program, the young Metropolitan tenor will sing "In My Garden," a composition of Mrs. Isabelle Firestone.

William Daly's orchestra will play De Falla's "Spanish Dance."

IT was at a big dinner in Washington. Among the entertainers was a comedian of national reputation.

"This man received $7,500 for a 20-minute appearance on the radio in New York last nigtt," his sponsor declared, introducing him to the diners.

"That is one thing which is giving an entirely erroneous impression with regard to the radio industry and which is doing it a lot of harm," a radio man who was present at the dinner, remarked. "There ought to be less talk about the high salaries the artists are receiving if they really are receiving such fabulous sums as is claimed.

"In my opinion, no entertainer is worth $7,500 for 20 minutes—unless maybe it's the last 20 minutes of his life. People hearing that such extravagant figures are paid to radio artists naturally assume that radio is simply rolling in money, when as a matter of fact, radio is having a rough time of it during this depression, along with the other industries. A quietus should be put on the talk of high salaries which artists claim to be receiving."

The Muscle Shoals power development which President-elect Roosevelt recently inspected will be the subject of discussion during the National radio forum. Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, will be the speaker. His talk on "The Muscle Shoals Project and What It Is Going to Mean to the Country" will be heard at 10:30 p. m., over WRC.

HERE'S one which our Hoosier colleague, Nelson B. Bell, might put in his movie column about Charles D. Hilles, of New York, just appointed one of the receivers for Paramount.

When Mr. Hilles was Secretary to the President he accompanied Mr. Taft to New York. A caller at the old Waldorf, where the President was stopping, was the Duke of Connaught, then Governor General of Canada.

A Washington correspondent (Robert Dougan, if our memory is correct) sent a note up to Mr. Hilles. It read:

"Can you tell us what the Duke of Connaught talked to the President about?"

Hilles replied:

"I am very sorry, but I Connaught!"

Cesar Franck's tone poem, "Les Eolides," a work seldom heard on the air, will be featured by Howard Barlow, conducting his Symphony Orchestra, over WJSV at 11 o'clock tonight. Other selections to be heard will include the first movement from Beethoven's Second Symphony, a spirited Spanish dance by De Falla, and the prelude from Bizet's "L'Arlesienne Suite," No. 1.

Referring to the protest made by Joy Elmer Morgan, of the committee on education in radio, against the acquisition of Station WMAL by the National Broadcasting Co., "An Interested Reader" writes:

"Mr. Morgan declared that if the N. B. C. took over WMAL it might cause a monopoly, as all the N. B. C. and C. B. S. outlets here are controlled from New York. Mr. Morgan is right in asserting that the outlets of both of these chains are controlled from New York; but this fact could hardly cause a monopoly, as the Federal Radio Commission would stop any such move to make it a monopoly.

"I think WMAL is greatly needed to bring to the Washington radio listener who could not get an outside 'blue' network station, the entire 'blue' network programs."

A series of recitals for two pianos, featuring Frances Hall and Rudolph Gruen, will begin over WRC at 7 o'clock tonight.

THROUGH the French Ambassador, Capt. William J. Stannard, leader of the United States Army Band, has been notified that he has been named "Officer d'Academie" by Anatole de Monzie, French minister of public instruction and beaux-arts. This recognition, Capt. Stannard explained, usually is bestowed upon those who have done something for or taken an interest in French music or art.

Morton Downey, Mildred Rose, Barbara Maurel, Theo Karle and Evan Evans will be featured during the Columbia Revue (WJSV, 10 o'clock) tonight.

SOMETHING like the kid who got the prize for making faces when he wasn't even playing, Fred Hufsmith, tenor, won an audition competition he had no idea of entering. Soon after he came to New York he dropped around to see a friend at a hotel. Auditions for the "Young Artist Series" of concerts were being held, some one suggested Hufsmith enter, so he borrowed the friend's music, quickly refreshed his memory on a song and delivered it for the judges. His rendition won him the right to appear in the concert, a distinction many had been practicing for months to achieve only to fail in the tryouts.

Washington Post Home Still Draws Hundreds

A visit to The Washington Post model home is a daily pleasure to hundreds of Washingtonians. Despite the wind, Sunday's bright sunshine increased the number of visitors to it.

The home, located at 418 Ingraham street northwest, has pleased many persons. Visitors are impressed by the substantial construction and convenient arrangement of this residence, built by B. H. Gruver, and the beauty of its furnishing and decoration by Joseph B. McSherry. The house will be open daily and Sundays until 9 p. m. To visit it, drive out Georgia avenue and Ingraham street, then turn right, or eastwardly, to the home.

Miss Richards to Speak On Hitler and Congress

Miss Janet Richards, at her weekly review this morning of "Current Public Questions," will speak first, under foreign affairs, of Hitlerism and the ever-changing European cabinets, and the possible effect upon the future of the League of Nations, followed by some comment on the amazing "expense account" of Congress versus attempted Government economy.

The alleged political merger of President-elect Roosevelt and the Progressives, and high lights on the Glass banking bill also will be discussed. The lecture begins at 11 a. m., in the red parlor of the Willard.

Harvard Scholarship Offered for One Year

A one-year scholarship of $750 to Harvard College or the Harvard Engineering School, is being offered a student from one of the Washington secondary schools by the local Harvard Club, it was announced yesterday.

Applications should be submitted to Henry Grattan Doyle, dean of George Washington University, by April 1. School records, references and character references should be submitted by applicants.

Bob White
The Old Philosopher
SAYS:

Question: I am the father of a boy 16 years of age. I do not seem to be able to get close enough to him to ward off the many dangers which will beset him. Why?

Answer: Well, first of all, because boys are like that. In this they differ from girls. There is an invisible barrier which rises between father and son at this age. It is a reticence on the boy's part, not wholly unexplainable. He has reached the age when he feels the call of individuality, and among his clan he seeks self-expression. He foolishly thinks his father will not understand this. It is one of life's big errors. Sons rarely understand fathers until they have sons of their own.

In your case do not be overanxious to break down this barrier. If your training has been healthy and your chumship sure, it will topple over of its own accord. Find enjoyment of mutual interest. Treat him, not as a boy, but as a young man; interest him in your side of life. Make him feel the bigness of responsibility. Take him out occasionally into deeper waters and show him the fun of battling the elements. It will make a man of him and after all, it is not so much a good boy you want as a fine man.

Bob White, the old philosopher, will answer an outstanding question each week day on this page. He is heard twice daily over WMAL at 9 a. m. and 4:30 p. m.

Christianity Is Bore, Says Touring Lecturer

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Christianity, as it exists today, is a bore, and there should be more fun in religion, Dr. Frank Buchman, founder of the Oxford movement, sometimes known as Buchmanism, said in a lecture here today.

People are "hungry to be understood," he said. For that reason the movement is sweeping the country, he declared. He is on a crusading tour of the Nation to enlist new adherents to his group.

Play Institute Meets Tomorrow.

The District of Columbia Play Institute will hold its first meeting of the year at 8 p. m. tomorrow at Roosevelt High School. A weekly course of instruction will be offered. Classes will be held every Tuesday night at the high school auditorium.

Lusnics Trounce Baltimore Team

Croson and Wilson Lead Attack in 46-17 Win at Hyattsville.

Lustine-Nicholson's high-geared machine outdistanced St. Bernard's quintet of Baltimore in a loosely played game yesterday at Hyattsville, winning by a score of 46-17. It was the tenth consecutive victory for the suburbanites. St. Bernard's is leading the Baltimore Catholic League.

With Joe Croson, lanky center, and Bob Wilson, forward, splitting the cords with deadly accuracy in the first period, the Lusnics rolled up a 24-4 lead. The visitors succeeded in damming the flow of points for a time immediately after the resumption of play, but could not completely check the home team.

Company F defeated the Naval Reserves, 21-16, in a fast preliminary. Lehman, Townsend and Spicknell, starred for the winners, while Ellington was outstanding for the losers.

HYATTSVILLE IN VICTORY.

Hyattsville tossers defeated a neighborly rival yesterday, turning back the Laurel Guards by a score of 41-23 in an interesting game played at Laurel. The teams battled on even terms for three quarters, but Hyattsville's superiority became evident in the final stanza when the home team was left far behind. McCann and Weber starred for the winners, with Weigel and Gray cast in the leading roles for Laurel.

"CAP" STUBBS — Next Time Uncle Ben Will Go! — By Edwina

LEGAL NOTICES

C. CLINTON JAMES, Attorney.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE District of Columbia, holding an Equity Court. George M. Emmerich, surviving trustee, plaintiff, vs. Nellie B. Seaton, widow, et al., defendants. Equity No. 93874. Notice is hereby given, as follows: On January 7, 1932, George M. Emmerich, as surviving trustee under a deed of trust on certain real estate in the District of Columbia, owned by Samuel W. Seaton, now deceased, has filed a bill in the above-entitled cause, advising the Court that default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness secured by said deed of trust, he sold said real estate at public auction on the 3 day of September, 1931, to one Clara D. Branson for $4,550.00, and that the proceeds of said sale are insufficient for the payment of the expenses of sale, adjustment of taxes and the payment of the balance due on said indebtedness, leaving the sum of $1,816.16 in his hands, for distribution to the persons lawfully entitled thereto, in accordance with their respective rights and interests. Upon consideration of said bill and the answers filed thereto, the Court, on January 13, 1933, made an order referring said cause to the Auditor of State, for proper distribution of the fund held by the plaintiff after an allowance of all proper claims against said fund, including counsel fees and guardian ad litem fee and the cost of this proceeding; provided that the Auditor shall first publish a thirty day notice once a week for three successive weeks against all persons other than the parties hereto that may have any claims against said fund. In pursuance of said order, the Auditor has set said cause down for a hearing on MONDAY, February 27, 1933, at 10:30 o'clock a. m., at the Auditor's Office in the United States Courthouse, Washington, D. C., at which time and place all persons having any claims against said fund are hereby warned to appear and prove the same. LEFTWICH SINCLAIR, Auditor of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Jan23,30,fe6

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., Washington, January 28, 1933.—Sealed proposals will be received at Room 500, District Building, until 2 o'clock p. m., February 7, 1933, for constructing about 3,629 linear feet of sewer varying in size from 10" to 48" in diameter. Apply Room 427, District Buildings, for proposals and specifications. Ja26,30,31-fe1,2,3

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

NOTABLES ON THE AIR.

MR. HAROLD F. McCORMICK, millionaire chairman of the International Harvester Co., gave a whistling solo over the radio the other night. Alfred E. Smith, once a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, recently sang "The Sidewalks of New York" over the air. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the next President, gives beauty talks over the radio.

* * * *

It is getting so you can't tune in any more and listen to radio entertainers of no prominence in life.

* * * *

WEAX.

7 p. m.—Yodeling by Charles M. Schwab, noted steel magnate.

7:30 p. m.—Sentimental Songs of the Southland by the Hon. Andrew W. Mellon.

THREE ADOPT OWN MEANS OF TAKING LIVES ON SABBATH

One Leaps Into Stream, One Strangles and Woman Inhales Fumes.

Three persons took their own lives yesterday by three different methods.

Leaving a poignant note, Joseph A. Stoddard, 36, of 1429 Potomac avenue southeast, leaped from the Anacostia Bridge to a watery death in the cold Eastern Branch before a pedestrian could stop him.

Stoddard shouted for help as he disappeared beneath the chilly current, but he did not appear again to grasp life preservers hurriedly hurled by bridge attendants. His body was recovered two hours later by harbor police.

A note found in his pocket, the address on which was illegible, read:

"Dear Darling:

"Just try to forgive me. This is the only way out. Don't bother about me. I ain't worth it. God bless you.

"JOE."

Brother Identifies Body.

William Stoddard, a brother of the drowned man, identified the body at the Morgue. The wife of the drowned man, Mrs. Alice Stoddard, could assign no reason for her husband's act.

Others who live at the Potomac avenue address said Stoddard appeared in a daze yesterday and that the only remark he made during the day was when coming in from a visit to his wife's relatives, he said resignedly:

"They're all sick."

It was explained that several of Mrs. Stoddard's family are ill.

Joseph H. Dockery, unemployed, 43-year-old bond salesman, was found dead in bed at the Patterson House, 1736 Pennsylvania avenue northwest by a chambermaid, a silk scarf knotted around his neck and affixed to the back of the bed.

Dies in Son's Apartment.

Mrs. Florence E. Carson, 46, ended her life by inhaling ill minating gas at the apartment of her son, William Carson, 2225 N street northwest. A missive, written on the backs of three Christmas cards, told of her intention and recited her affection for a daughter in New York.

Dockery was found by Maggie Standard, colored, when she went to clean the room. He had registered the day before in the afternoon, but had also spent the previous night at the hotel. His wife, Mrs. Faith Dockery, lives at 2301 Cathedral avenue northwest.

The bond salesman, a war veteran, had been in ill health for some time, having had treatment at both Emergency and Walter Reed Hospitals within the last six months. He had lived here for some time and had been connected at various times with several brokerage concerns here.

Mrs. Carson was found after Clarence Blackwell, apartment janitor, noted gas odors and entered the apartment of her son. She was in the living room, which adjoins the kitchen in which room all gas jets were open on the range.

Hundreds See Bobbing Hat.

Stoddard's hat, bobbing around on the muddy water of the river, held the curious gaze of hundreds who lined the bridge rail, and scores of automobiles parked along the Fairlawn drive to watch operations of harbor police dragging for the body.

Edwin Talbott, 4260 Wheeler road southeast, walking across the bridge, saw Stoddard jump after looking both ways. The shout of Talbott did not dissuade him and the former gave the alarm to bridge attendants.

Dockery's last business connection, several months ago, was with the Robert C. Jones & Co. brokerage house and before that he was identified with the G. M.-P. Murphy & Co. brokerage firm.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued certificates of suicide in all three deaths.

DE VALERA VICTORY CELEBRATED HERE

District Irish See Election as First Step in Collapse of British Rule.

The victory of Eamon de Valera in the recent elections in Ireland was seen as a step toward a united Irish republic and the beginning of the downfall of the British government at a celebration last night of 300 Irish sympathizers in Washington at the Playhouse, 1814 N street northwest.

Oratory and wild cheers marked the meeting. The principal speakers were John F. Finnerty, local lawyer; Charles Edward Russell, president of the Kevin Barry Council; Representatives John J. Douglas, of Massachusetts, and F. H. LaGuardia, of New York, and the Rev. W. J. Hubbard, pastor of the Fountain Memorial Baptist Church.

Three resolutions were adopted. One offered congratulations to President de Valera. The second "demanded" that the State Department of the United States cease negotiating with Great Britain on the subject of war debts "so long as Great Britain tries by starvation and oppression to collect from Ireland stupendous sums of money that are neither legally nor morally due." A third indorsed the Buy American movement.

The real issue in the Free State election was described as being between independence and servitude, "between the national dignity and an alien domination."

Mr. Finnerty charged that the American press has been blind to the real wishes of the Irish people, but is at last recognizing that the Irish want nothing less than an Independent Irish republic.

Mr. Russell saw the De Valera victory making the first crack in the structure of the British Empire.

Representative Douglas criticized the appearance of the British Ambassador in the Senate in connection with the war debts. "The Ambassador must have thought the United States is still a British province," he observed.

Representative LaGuardia said that the fight is not over and must continue until all Ireland is united in liberty and until the Irish republic is recognized by other nations of the world and first by the United States.

FOULOIS APPOINTED INAUGURAL AIR CHIEF

Hildreth Reports Tickets for Ceremonies Are in Great Demand.

Appointment of Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Army Air Corps, as air marshal of the Roosevelt inaugural parade, was announced yesterday by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the Roosevelt inaugural committee. Gen. Foulois will be in charge of all air activities, service and civilian, which take place during the inaugural period.

Although the plans for aerial activities have not been finally developed, it is likely that there will be a concentration of aircraft from nearby fields of both the Army and the Navy. The general entertainment committee is projecting plans for a separate air show on one of the days preceding the inauguration and the parade itself is, of course, certain to be accompanied by some aerial maneuvers during the time of its march. Maj. Gen. Foulois will coordinate his activities with those under the direction of Gen. John J. Pershing, grand marshal of the inaugural parade.

Officials of the parade committee announced yesterday that the Richmond Blues, a striking feature of every inauguration in which they have taken part, have accepted an invitation to participate this year. Indicative of the general interest which the parade is creating is the fact that arrangements already have been made by organizations from the States of Pennsylvania, Georgia, Iowa, Alabama, Virginia, New York and New Jersey, in addition to those from the District of Columbia, to have places in the line of march. From the early response, which has naturally come mostly from nearby States, officials of the parade committee believe that it is possible that they will have to revise the number which can enter the parade.

The housing and hospitality committee, of which Mrs. Blair Banister is chairman, has further extended the use which it intends to make of cooperating agencies by accepting an offer from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for its facilities at Union Station, in the routing of inaugural visitors directly from the station to accommodations which may be assigned to them.

Melvin D. Hildreth, executive secretary of the grandstand ticket sales committee, stated yesterday that the committee, of which Daniel C. Roper is chairman, had already banked more than $8,000 from the sale of tickets and that applications for reservations had been received for $6,000 worth of additional tickets.

Traffic Blocked at Church When Police Chief Appears

Maj. Brown Given Big Hand at Services Presided Over by Elder Michaux; Prayers Are Offered for Forgotten Man.

Traffic was blocked last night in the aisles of the Church of God, on Georgia avenue, above Florida avenue, when Elder Michaux, sky pilot and radio evangelist, hailed Maj. E. W. Brown, chief of police, as he entered to address the congregation, more than 1,200 of whom occupied every available space. As he seated himself on the platform, a gray-robed choir sang "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty."

The elder offered a prayer for the forgotten man, and introduced a trio with banjo, mandolin and harmonica, who led the inspirational singing of "He Knows the Cheer," and were followed by a quartet from Baltimore. Maj. Brown was introduced as a man interested not only in putting criminals in jail, but also in keeping men and women away from crime.

"He is a minister of the law," said Elder Michaux, "and I am a minister of grace. He pastors a hard head and I pastor a soft heart. It is the duty of the minister of the law to restrain you until you get a taste of love for your fellow man. Nothing should be more respected than the law, and we should show the Police Department that we have love and respect for them, for they are human, as the rest of us."

Responding, Maj. Brown requested that the choir sing "Happy Am I" before he departed. "I wonder," he said, "if you know what it means for the depressed and despondent to hear that song of yours over the radio? It is because of this that you are the only church in the District of Columbia tonight with your aisles jammed. I am glad the fire marshal is not here, as I would have to arrest him that the service might go on.

"I am glad that the police force and this church are looking after social needs of the people. Too much in our worldly life have we lost sight of things spiritual. I take pride in the memory of family devotions in my home on the farm in boyhood, and it is with the same spirit of devotion that you have undertaken to bring into your church the unfortunates of the street."

Preaching on the text, "Keep yourself unspotted from the world," Elder Michaux explained that in the Police Department there are spotters. The text means, he said, "if you live right, you can't be spotted by the police, or put on the spot by the world."

He explained the special purpose of the meeting, to raise the initial funds for $3,000 worth of improvements by February 10, to be made by the congregation's free labor on a $250,000 group of delapidated buildings at Seventh and T streets northwest, donated by R. B. Behrend for use of deserving evicted families that they might be kept together for a year through the instrumentality of the Church of God and friends.

"We shall now sing 'Happy Am I' for the police chief," said the elder. "When we sing this song, every one must give a sign of life. He must pat his foot, nod his head, or clap his hands. And if he is a high Episcopalian, and can't do either, he must work his fingers.

Maj. Brown responded with hands and feet, and was given a round of prolonged applause.

Body of Fishing Guide Recovered From Water

The body of Capt. Joseph "Budd" Chaney, 45, a fishing guide known to many Washington fishermen, who was drowned Friday when he fell from a wharf near his Galesville, Md., home, was recovered yesterday by Capt. George Hazzard.

Capt. Chaney fell into the water while trying to fasten his boat to the wharf during a violent storm. He was well known to Washington anglers for his knowledge of the fishing grounds in Chesapeake Bay. He is survived by his widow and two children.

Incendiary Blamed In $200 House Fire

Trash Apparently Piled Up and Soaked With Oil, Police Declare.

Fire, apparently of incendiary origin, yesterday swept through the second and third floors of a vacant house at 1130 Fifth street northwest, causing damage estimated at $200.

Firemen said the blaze started in a trash pile at the foot of a second-floor stairway. The trash, they declared, apparently had been piled against the wall and soaked with coal oil.

More oil-soaked trash was found in a closet on the third floor, it was reported. The flames were quickly brought under control.

2,000 YEARS CAUSED FEW CHANGES, SAYS DR. FEUCHTWANGER

Social Concepts Infantile, German Author Asserts in Center Talk.

Modern moral concepts of suicide and the advance of technology are the only salient differences in the civilization of today and that of 2,000 years ago, Dr. Lion Feuchtwanger, famous German author and playwright, said last night at the National Forum of the Jewish Community Center.

Famous for his historical novels, among them "Power," "The Ugly Duchess" and his latest novel, "Josephus," Dr. Feuchtwanger stated that while civilized nations looked upon suicide as a gesture of superiority over the elements and an independent release from physical and moral bondage in the Roman Empire era, today it is considered a mark of degradation and inferiority.

He stressed the fact that the instincts of man have remained unchanged and that the cycles of time have left the world as it was in early times despite our protestations of mechanistic and educational advance.

Sameness of Instinct.

Illustrating his contentions by reading exerpts from ancient letters and books, the German author stated that the fact that the books of that era are interesting and alive to modern readers is proof of the sameness of instinct and personality.

Faces, he pointed out, were the same. A portrait of a general of the Roman Empire and one of the World War, he said were identical. Bankers, boxers and artisans, he also said, were similar.

Charging that our social concepts were infantile, Dr. Feuchtwanger said that even though the human race has remained unchanged for the last 20 decades, the fact that we are accumulating more specific scientific knowledge and are displaying an increased consciousness of "fairness" to ourselves and fellow tenants of the earth, may have some reflection on our instincts and ideals.

Address Follows Election.

His address followed an election of officers and trustees of the Jewish Community Center. Frederic William Wile acted as chairman of the forum.

The following officers were elected: Morris Cafritz, president; Benjamin Ourisman, David Wiener and Mrs. James Lansburgh, vice presidents; Harry Viner, treasurer; John Korman, associate treasurer; Abe Shefferman, recording secretary, and Moe Offenberg, corresponding secretary.

Elected to the board of trustees were Mrs. Harry Bernton, Judge Nathan Cayton, Isadore Freund, Fred Gichner, Paul Himmelfarb, Dr. J. Kotz, Frederic William Wile, Morris Wittlin, Mrs. Charles Rosenthal, Maj. J. I. Peyser, Miss Jeanne Porton, Miss Aline Solomons, Burnett Siman, Joseph Stein, E. I. Kaufmann, Morris Gewirz, Morris Garfinkle, Louis Ottenberg and Mrs. Henry Oxenburg.

Dr. Clinchy Lauds Rousseau Teaching

Not All Creators of Beauty Are Saints, Reminder From Minister.

Although the personal life of Jean Jacques Rousseau was far from exemplary, the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, minister of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, pointed out yesterday in his sermon that it is well to remember that the truth of his thoughts is not dependent upon his actions.

"We wish all creators of beauty were saints, but they are not. Byron and Shelley gave both truth and beauty to mankind, but they were not the kind of men we want our sons to be.

"The teachings of Rousseau, who preached that all men are born with equal rights politically, socially and economically and who advocated the abolishment of all forms of government, in fact of civilization itself, are acknowledged as one of the prime causes of the French revolution.

"He was at times the popular ideal and at times the popular outcast, but ever someone with whom the people had to deal. His firm and unswerving faith in his belief that man's nature is fundamentally good, that nature came from the hand of God and that therefore the natural man is good, and his philosophy that no man should be rich enough to buy another and that no man should be so poor as to be obliged to sell himself founded a movement in his age which set the eighteenth century afire. The twentieth century yet awaits some one who will set our times afire."

Rock Creek Crash Inquest Due Today

Three Occupants of Auto That Killed Policeman to Be Quizzed.

Circumstances of the fatal crash Saturday leading to the death of Private James Francis Grove, Park Police, will be probed today by a coroner's jury at the District Morgue.

The three young men, occupants of the coupe which struck the policeman's motorcycle on a curve in Rock Creek Park, are free on bond pending their testimony at the inquest.

Grove's body is at the Hysong undertaking establishment pending funeral arrangements. His wife, who was convalescing from an illness, arrived here yesterday. Eight children survive, seven by Grove's first wife, who is dead, and a 4-month-old son by his second. The children are Mrs. Cartha Seger, 23; Wolford Grove, 21; Mrs. Olive Small, 18; James Grove, 17; Frances Grove, 16; Edith Grove, 14; Mary Grove, 12, and Richard Earl, 4 months.

DR. DUNHAM SPEAKS ON CHRISTIAN LIVING

Presbyterian Audience Told Remedies for Unrest Lie in Right Conduct.

Remedies for unrest, dissatisfaction, and even that despair which drives increasing numbers of Washington people to suicide annually are close at hand, pointed out the Rev. J. Harvey Dunham at the Western Presbyterian Church yesterday morning. His topic was "The Unmastered Science—the Science of Right Living."

Finding his text "Fear God and keep His commandments for this is the whole duty of man," in Ecclesiastes 12-13, he said in part, "We are living in a scientific age when even the little children surprise us with their knowledge of technical terminology. But there is one unmastered science in which some people have progressed but large numbers haven't been interested. I do not mean technocracy.

"The unmastered science is the science of right living. So simple and straightforward are the words of the text that they bring us face to face with the key to its mastery. Right living is the science par excellence. We can not ignore traffic laws without incurring fatalities. We can not ignore the laws of God without suffering the consequences.

Questions Kipling Poem.

"Kipling in one of his poems pictures an alluring place somewhere East of Suez, 'where there aren't no Ten Commandments,' but not many of us would really want to live in such a place. The Ten Commandments are ten silent policemen who never slumber or sleep. They are always on our trails. Nations may default and repudiate their honest debts but other nations can not forget.

"Some nations have the same notion that Columbus had, that money was the most desirable thing, that gold can buy anything. They are wrong just as he was. Right living is based on the laws of God. A Christian is one who follows Christ. Change just one letter in Christian and we have Christ-man, which is a good name for one who has mastered the art of right living.

Says Task Is Not Easy.

"Christ never intended to make Christian living easy. It was not planned that we are to 'be carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease.' Christian living takes all there is in a man to do it.

"We hear some criticism of types of people who are held up as Christians, but the true Christian life is a well-balanced all-around life.

"It was Kipling in his late life who when ill, was asked by the nurse who saw his lips move: 'Is there something you want?' and he replied, 'I am afraid I want God.' Who is there who does not have deep in his heart a longing for the touch of some vanished hand?

"The unmastered science is the science of right living—Christian life satisfies."

PASTOR SEES RUIN IF GOD IS IGNORED

Queen of Sheba's Visit to Solomon Pointed Out by Dr. Hutchinson.

"As individuals and as a Nation we must repent of our sins and turn to God; otherwise, speaking from the standpoint of the Nation, we will 'go the way of all the earth,'" declared Dr. Forney Hutchinson, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church South, yesterday morning.

"The Other Half" was the topic of the minister's sermon. It was based on the story of the visit of the Queen of Sheba to King Solomon, found in the Book of Second Chronicles, ninth chapter, first to eighth verses.

Dr. Hutchinson said, in part:

"When the visit was over and she was about to take her departure, she said, 'I have heard much of the glories of your kingdom, but now, after having seen it at first hand, I recognize that the half had not been told me.' She spoke truly—more truly than she knew—and after she had gone at least a half had not been told her.

Parallel Is Drawn.

"As I have said, this story is interesting in itself, but it has its chief value to us in its similarity to conditions which obtain in our own country today. If the Queen of Sheba or even the Queen of Roumania were to visit us today, we could, with variations, easily duplicate this story.

"She would be shown, through some prominent representative of the head of our Nation, much of our material splendor; our magnificent buildings; our tremendous wealth; our schools and colleges and universities, our art galleries, our unsurpassed philanthropies; our great and expensive churches. She would probably be profoundly impressed and at the close of her visit would report that while she had heard much of the glories of our Nation, that until she came and saw for herself, the half had not been told her.

Would Be Correct.

"She would be exactly correct in that statement but not altogether in the sense in which she intended. The other half, and maybe the biggest half, of this Nation she probably would not have seen.

"She would hear nothing of our burdensome debts, now amounting to 21 billions with a daily increase of 5 millions, with proportionate obligations on other units of our Government such as State, county and municipal. She would not be told that the budget had not been balanced, even though many leaders considered shifting the burden of taxes from the rich man's magnificent income to the poor man's beer mug.

"She would probably not have seen the dire poverty and destitution that is now becoming so common and evident in this great, rich country.

"This, you say, is a dark picture. We look in one direction and another. So far we have looked in vain. In God alone is our hope."

637 AT HIGH SCHOOLS WILL GET DIPLOMAS; EXERCISES ON TODAY

Graduating Class Members to Take Prominent Part in Programs.

High school midyear commencement exercises, to be held today and tomorrow, will be featured by addresses by prominent educators and persons in other walks of life. A total of 637 students will be graduated from the white high schools.

Members of the graduating classes will take a prominent part in the programs, to be composed of music and speaking. A great many of the graduates will remain in high school to take postgraduate courses, rather than face the task of trying to find employment or the expense of college educations.

The graduation exercises at the new Roosevelt High School, to be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the auditorium, will be the first ever held in this new edifice. Seventy students will receive diplomas.

Dr. Ballou Speaker.

Dr. Hayden Johnson, president of the Board of Education, will be presiding officer, and Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, will speak. Ada Sherman, the valedictorian, will address the class, and the diplomas will be awarded by Dr. William Earl Clark.

The only other high school group in the white system to have exercises tonight will be the three-year class of Eastern. The exercises will begin at 8 p. m. John A. Reilly, vice president of the Federal-American National Bank, will deliver the address. The diplomas will be presented by Mrs. Arthur S. Bishop, a member of the executive committee of the alumni association of the school. Harry O. Hine, secretary of the Board of Education, will preside. The class is composed of 50 students.

190 at Central High.

Henry Gilligan, a member of the Board of Education, will preside at graduation exercises of 190 students at Central High School tomorrow night. The principal address will be made by Dean George B. Wood, of American University.

The exercises at McKinley also tomorrow will be conducted by officers of the graduating class and there will be no speaker. The class is made up of 190 graduates. George M. Whitwell, members of the Board of Education, will preside.

The Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., doctor of sociology at Catholic University, will address the 89 graduates of the four-year class of Eastern at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Dr. Wallace M. Water, professor of medicine at Georgetown University, and a member of the alumni association of the school, will present the diplomas. Miss Jesse LaSalle, assistant superintendent of schools, will preside.

Essary Will Speak.

J. Fred Essary, Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, will address the 86 graduates at Western at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow. Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, member of the Board of Education, will preside.

In the colored school system, Armstrong High School will hold exercises at 8 p. m. tomorrow, Cardozo at 2 p. m. today, and Dunbar at 8 p. m. today.

Salvation Army Opens New Clothing Service

The new children's clothing department of the social service branch of the Salvation Army will be formally opened today at 112 Constitution avenue, Brig. John G. McGee, director, announced last night.

Unemployed woman, skilled in needlework, have been engaged to remodel cast-off dresses and suits into garments for needy school children. Brig. McGee issued an appeal for women's gowns, the skirts of which can be made into dresses for little girls. The new department was inspected and approved last night by Col. A. E. Smeeton, chief secretary of the Southern territory of the Salvation Army.

Guest Is Found Dead At Baltimore Hotel

Alfred Iverson, 30, who registered at the Baltimore Hotel, 808½ Twelfth street northwest, from Athens, Ga., Saturday afternoon, was found dead in his room early yesterday.

A physician from Emergency Hospital said death was apparently due to natural causes. He was found by E. M. Vartan, manager of the hotel. The body was taken to the District Morgue to await word from Athens.

TRAFFIC TOLL

TO DATE.

Hotheaded paranoiac drivers are to be avoided and feared more than any other type on the roads. Of course it is rather difficult in some cases to identify such a driver when you are motoring.

A well-known doctor of psychology described such drivers as the ones who think every one is trying to get the best of them. If other drivers do not, in their opinion, conform to their ideas of how automobiles should be driven, they are absolutely at fault and should be dealt with accordingly, usually the hot-headed motorist attempting to take matters into his own hands.

One who is easily angered is a very dangerous driver to have in your immediate vicinity. He may be vindictive and deliberately stop his car suddenly to "show" the driver behind him. He is full of alibis and is equally full of trouble, according to psychologists.

The accident figures are:

Deaths	0	4
Injuries	283	297
Accidents	969	934
